MILITARY ESCORT.

HIS Excellency the GOVERNOR is pleased to direct the publication of the following General Order, dated 22nd September, 1832, No. 222, pointing out the duty of Military Escorts when required to aid the civil authorities as guard over prisoners, for the information and guidance of the civil officers to whom it relates.

By His Excellency's Command,

E. DEAS THOMSON.

(COPY.)

GENERAL ORDER.

No. 222.

Sydney, 22nd September, 1832.

The following instructions are to be strictly attended to by officers and non-commissioned officers commanding detachments of infantry at out-stations in this command.

Upon the application of a Justice of the Peace for a military party to patrol the roads or bush, to search for offenders, or to assist in the execution of a warrant, the party is to be immediately granted by the officers or non-commissioned officers in command, provided that a Justice, or the chief or principal constable of the district proceeds with the party. If the Justice or peace officer shall afterwards leave the party with which he set out, the party is to return immediately to quarters.

Parties for the escort of prisoners are to be furnished when applied for by a Justice of the Peace personally, or in writing, provided that the escort be accompanied by a constable holding the magistrate's warrant and having charge of the prisoners. The escort being furnished to protect the constable in the execution of the warrant, and to prevent rescue or escape, the non-commissioned officers commanding the escort will carefully attend to the constable's directions for such purposes. The distance to which escorts are to proceed will be regulated as far as practicable by the situation of the military post, gaol, or lock-up house, in the direction of their route. Escorts on leaving the detachment will always be furnished with a written paper of route, showing the distance they are to proceed, with the places they are to halt, and the number of days for which they are rationed.

A return is to be forwarded to the Brigade Office on the last day of every month, showing the number and strength of escorts furnished during that month. In the event of any duty being required beyond what the strength of the detachment can with propriety perform, an immediate report is to be made of the circumstance to the Major of Brigade at Sydney. When escorts arrive at one military post from another, the officer or non-commissioned officer at the former will furnish a like escort to proceed with the prisoners, if required by the constable holding the warrant so to do.

Officers and non-commissioned officers in command at the out-stations will turn out the detachments in support of the civil power for the suppression of riot, or the preservation of the peace, whenever required by the Sheriff of the Colony or by any Justice of the Peace.

The Mounted Police, at out-stations where infantry are quartered, are subject to the orders of the officer in command, in all matters of military duties, and interior economy in barracks and stables, but they will receive their orders from their own officers, or from the Justices of the Peace of the district in which they may be stationed. The foregoing instructions for escorts do not therefore relate to the Mounted Police, who will receive their orders through their own officers.

By Command, &c.

Major of Brigade.

O'Neale, in May, 1825, had conveyed it by Deed of Gift to Brown and his wife, and, in September, 1831, they applied for the Deed of Grant. On the 30th October, 1832, it was advertised for Deeds in O'Neale's name, but in April, 1837, he applied to have the Deed made to Charles Beilby. That application, however, he subsequently withdrew. Both Brown and wife are now deceased.
