WILLIAM WRIGHT,

HAVING resumed the license of the above Hotel, takes the present opportunity of informing his friends, that on Monday next, it will be thrown open for public accommodation, when he anticipates the pleasure of their company, to inspect the various arrangements he has made for their comfort and convenience.

The whole premises have undergone a thorough repair, rendering the establishment complete and desirable in every particular, and worthy the attention of parties either resident in town or periodically visiting Melbourne, as they will always find ready, well aired beds, together with every description of refreshment, at moderate charges, combined with civil attendance.

"Good wine needs no bush," is an adage on which W. W. places considerable reliance, still he would be inflicting unnecessary punishment on the palate of the connoisseur, did he not point out his choice cellar of wines, not to be surpassed either in quality or variety; at the same time not forgetting his selection of first brand spirits and malt liquors requiring a trial only to be duly appreciated.

The state of the times has induced W. W. to lower the charges upon a horse to four shillings per night.

TO THE BENEVOLENT AND AFFLUENT

THE subscriber begs to solicit the public in aid of a widow and seven children, whose destitute situation has induced him to undertake the erection of a "Shieling" on a small piece of ground which has been purchased for her by a few benevolent individuals. The case is that of a Mrs. Hennessy, living at Richmond, whose husband died about twelve months ago, leaving her with seven female children depending on her exertions for support, her health being occasionally very indifferent. Three months ago, mere chance brought the poor woman's case to the subscriber's knowledge, and from its decided nature he resolved upon erecting a home for the widow and the fatherless, taking his chance of being assisted by his friends and the public, on whom he will call personally in a few days, and will be glad to accept the meagre trifle on her behalf.
