THE BRITISH HOTEL.

WILLIAM WRIGHT,

HAVING resumed the license of the above Hotel, takes the present opportunity of informing his friends, that on Monday next, it will be thrown open for public accommodation, when he anticipates the pleasure of their company, to inspect the various arrangements he has made for their comfort and convenience.

The whole premises have undergone a thorough repair, rendering the establishment complete and desirable in every particular, and worthy the attention of parties either resident in town or periodically visiting Melbourne, as they will always find ready, well aired beds, together with every description of refreshment, at moderate charges, combined with civil attendance.

"Good wine needs no bush," is an adage on which W. W. places considerable reliance, still he would be inflicting unnecessary punishment on the palate of the connoisseur, did he not point out his choice cellar of wines, not to be surpassed either in quality or variety; at the same time not forgetting his selection of first brand spirits and malt liquors requiring a trial only to be duly appreciated.

The state of the times has induced W. W. to lower the charges upon a horse to four shillings per night.

N.B.—Breakfasts, Dinners, Teas, Suppers &c. got up with despatch.

Storage for property of any description.

Notices

ABSCONDED from Mr Ed. Parker's sheep station, Grampians, on the evening of the 14th April, 1843. James Smith, this is to caution parties from hiring the said man, a warrant having been granted for his apprehension.
