By His Excellency SIR CHARLES AUGUSTUS FITZ ROY, Knight Companion of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order, Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief of the Territory of New South Wales and its Dependencies, and Vice-Admiral of the same, &c., &c., &c.

WHEREAS by Proclamation bearing date the twenty-fourth day of July, One thousand eight hundred and forty-four, Tolls are appointed and directed to be demanded, levied, and taken upon the Parish Road leading from Sydney to Muddbank, at Cook's River, in the County of Cumberland, under the provisions of an Act of the Governor and Legislative Council passed in the fourth year of the reign of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, intituled, "An Act to provide for the making and repairing of Parish Roads in the Colony of New South Wales;" and whereas by the said recited Act it is amongst other things enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the Governor of the said Colony, by an order under his hand, to authorise the Trustees of any Parish Road to grant a lease or leases of the Tolls to be collected or levied thereon for any period of time not exceeding one year, and from time to time to renew such lease or leases at the highest or best rent or value to be obtained for the same either by public auction or otherwise: Now, therefore, I, Sir Charles Augustus Fitz Roy, Knight Companion of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order, Governor of the said Colony for the time being, do hereby authorise the Trustees of the said Parish Road leading from Sydney to Muddbank, at Cook's River, to grant a lease or leases of the Tolls to be collected thereon, according with and subject to the terms and provisions of the said recited Act.

Given under my Hand and Seal, at Government House, Sydney, this twenty-fourth day of February, in the year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and forty-nine.

PROCLAMATION.

By His Excellency SIR CHARLES AUGUSTUS FITZ ROY, Knight Companion of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order, Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief of the Territory of New South Wales and its Dependencies, and Vice-Admiral of the same, &c., &c., &c.

WHEREAS by Letters Patent, under the Great Seal of Great Britain, bearing date the twentieth day of February, in the ninth year of the reign of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, I, Sir Charles Augustus Fitz Roy, am constituted and appointed Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief in and over the Territory of New South Wales and its Dependencies, within the limits therein described, save and except that part of the said Territory called and known by the name of the Province of South Australia; and whereas the eastern boundary line of the said Province, which separates it from this Colony, was by Letters Patent, bearing date the nineteenth day of February, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-six, issued by His late Majesty King William the Fourth, fixed at the one hundred and forty-first degree of east longitude, reckoning from the meridian of Greenwich; and whereas it having become necessary to mark out and ascertain the said one hundred and forty-first degree of east longitude between the said Territory of New South Wales and the said Province of South Australia, an arrangement was entered into with the Government of South Australia for that purpose, in consequence of which the position of the said one hundred and forty-first degree of east longitude has been correctly ascertained at a spot on the sea coast near the mouth of the River Glenelg, and therefrom northward as far as the thirty-sixth parallel of south latitude; and whereas it is expedient that the said boundary line, so marked and surveyed, should be made known: Now, therefore, I, Sir Charles Augustus Fitz Roy, as such Governor as aforesaid, do hereby notify and proclaim the line so marked and surveyed, and particularly described in the schedule hereto annexed, and delineated on the public maps in the Survey Offices in Sydney and Melbourne respectively, shall be deemed and construed to be the boundary line between the said Territory of New South Wales and the Province of South Australia respectively as far as the same extends.

Given under my Hand and Seal, at Government House, Sydney, this twenty-eighth day of February, in the year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and forty-nine, and in the twelfth year of Her Majesty's Reign.

(L.S.) CHAS. A. FITZ ROY.

By His Excellency's Command,
E. DEAS THOMSON.

GOD SAVE THE QUEEN!

The boundary line commences at a point on the west side of the river Glenelg, 1 mile 42 chains and 50 links from the western point of entrance, where the 141st degree of east longitude cuts the sea coast at high water mark in latitude 38 degrees 4 minutes 3 seconds, and runs due north along that meridian, crossing at 2 chains 25 links a brackish stream 1 chain wide, continuing thence 1 chain 50 links to a pile of stones erected on the Sand Hummocks crossing 1 chain 90 links further on, the road from Mr. Neil Black's head station to the mouth of the Glenelg River; 24 chains from the road a pile of stones was erected in latitude 38 degrees 3 minutes 27 seconds south, an out station of Neil Black's being a few chains to the west. The western entrance of the Glenelg from the inner Basin measures 2 miles 27 chains and 40 links true east from this pile of stones, from which the line was carried on for 2 miles 15 chains 60 links, (leaving Neil Black's head station 2 miles 40 chains westward) over undulating limestone country thickly timbered with chiefly casuarinae mixed with Banksia, Lightwood, Box and stunted gum to a bend of the River, the distance across which including the River on both sides was 1 mile 60 chains 40 links through stringy bark scrub and heath; from the bank of the River the line passed through thick stringy bark scrub, for 71 chains and 28 links to the road from Neil Black's to Nolan's, from which the line was carried on through dense stringy bark scrub for 8 miles 61 chains 87 links to the east road from Mount Gambier to the Glenelg River, leaving Mr. Meredith's station about 3 miles on the left from the Mount Gambier Road. Nolan's station is seven miles to the eastward, and Mount Gambier 10 or 12 miles to the westward. The line passes over some limestone ridges for 3 miles 29 chains and 50 links to a swamp, having a station of Mr. Meredith's about a mile to the westward, Mr. Curran's 2 miles to the north-west, and Mr. Beilby's about 8 miles east-north-east; from this swamp the line was continued for 4 miles 78 chains to a limestone ridge; thence for 6 miles 43 chains to the old Mount Gambier road to the Glenelg River near the junction of the Wannon, Mr. Munro's Inn being about 20 chains to the east, and Messrs. Butes' station 1 mile to the westward; at 1 mile 64 chains 30 links through thick Banksia, it crossed the road leading from Messrs. Bates' old head station to Mr. Charles McKinnon's, and passing through heath and open forest for 3 miles 60 chains, crossed the track leading from Mr. Charles McKinnon's woolshed to Mr. Edward Henty's waterhole 70 chains to the eastward or in Port Phillip; thence passing over a stringy bark ridge, leaving Mr. McKinnon's woolshed about a mile to the westward and continuing on for 3 miles 18 chains 50 links, passed a station of McKinnon's 20 chains to the east of the line, his home station being about 4 miles to the westward; and at 1 mile 37 chains 80 links it crossed the main road from Adelaide to Melbourne, from which passing through dense stringy bark for 4 miles 58 chains 70 links, it crossed a track leading to Ewen Cameron's, about 1 mile to the eastward, and continuing on through the same description of country for 10 miles 10 chains and 30 links entered the "Wattle rises" an out station of Mr. Austin's, being about 4 miles to the south-west; proceeding onwards at 1 mile 11 chains and 30 links, it passes about 20 chains to the east of Messrs. McNichol and Smith's station, and 2 miles 41 chains 70 links further on, passes about 50 chains to the east of an out station of Mr. William Wallace's; at a distance of 3 miles 35 chains beyond this it passes to the east of another out station of Mr. Wallace, and 69 chains 30 links further on crosses the road leading from these stations to Mr. Wallace's head station, on Mosquito Creek, and passing on through a low swampy country for 4 miles 48 chains 70 links, leaving a station of Mr. McConnell's, about 2 miles to the Westbruck, Mosquito Creek, leaving Mr. Wallace's head station about 3 miles 40 chains to the eastward, and an out station of his a mile to the westward; 11 chains 18 links from the creek it crosses the road from Mr. Robertson's station to Mr. Wallace's; thence 1 mile 78 chains 82 links it crosses the road from Messrs. Oliver and Smith's station to Mr. Wallace's; 3 miles 74 chains 30 links further on it crosses a small creek, Mr. John Dixon's station being about 40 chains to the eastward; from this creek the boundary line continues on for 1 mile 73 chains 20 links to a road leading to Adelaide past Mr. Oliver's station, Mr. Ballantyne's station being about 4 miles to the eastward; from this road the line at 2 miles 55 chains 25 links crosses the main north road from Adelaide to Melbourne; 4 miles 43 chains 25 links from which passing 20 chains to the east of a station of Mr. Townsend's, it crosses a road leading from Mr. Townsend's home station to the Glenelg river; thence 1 mile 24 chains 20 links it crosses a road from Mr. Townsend's home station (which is about 1 mile to the westward) to Mr. Thomas Gibson's station about 12 miles to the eastward; 1 mile 30 chains 80 links from this road the line crosses a road from Mr. Hugh McLeod's home station, which is nearly a mile to the south-east, to an out station of his, about the same distance on the west; thence 1 mile 21 chains 20 links to a road from Hugh McLeod's home station to his out station at Lake Cadnite, 1 mile 73 chains 90 links; from this road the line crosses another road from Mr. Henry Jones' home station, distant to the west about 2 miles 60 chains to his out station 1 mile 40 chains east of the line, and continuing on, passes at 4 miles about 1 mile to the eastward of a station of Hugh McLeod's on Lake Cadnite, thence 3 miles 62 chains 90 links to the first belt of Marlee scrub, an out station of Mr. Derwas Jones, being about 1 mile to the east, and a station of Williamson's and Blow's 6 miles 40 chains to the westward; the boundary line continues on through this scrub, passing about 4 miles to the east of Mr. McLean's station, for 13 miles 53 chains, and leaving the stations of Messrs. Scott, Binnie, and L. McLeod all to the westward, passes about 12 chains to the west of Baird and Hodgkinson's station; a short distance further, crossing at a distance of 9 miles 53 chains from the scrub passed through a pine ridge, 3 miles 72 chains, from which the line again enters the Marlee scrub, through which it was carried for 1 mile 23 chains, when a large mound of earth was erected in an open patch of heath about 10 chains in diameter, where the survey and marking of the line for the present terminates, which is marked by a double row of blazed trees and mounds of earth and stone; where no trees exist the mounds are placed within sight of each other.

Description of the Land.—The features of the land about Agulhas distinguish it from the neighbouring headlands. A ridge-shaped undulating clump, rising from the flat ground, is separated into four ridge-shaped hills by irregular ravines running nearly true east and west. The middle ridges enter, wedge-like, at the east-end, and are lost towards the centre, where the ravine widens to a mile in breadth. The middle ridges are the lowest, the northern and southern are nearly of equal height.

Viewed at a distance from the seaward, easterly or westerly, the north and south elevations being seen nearly end on, resemble two oblong hummocks; but the former extending more easterly appears the highest as seen from the eastward.

Viewed at a distance from the southward, the south ridge masks the others, save at their east end; but the ravines being hid, the whole appear to be united (only the south and middle ridges are noticed on the Chart. They are all given on COL. MICHELL'S plan.)

The highest part of the south ridge is 455 feet above the level of the sea, and its true meridional distance from the shore is almost exactly one mile. From this point the descent eastward, is rather gradual. Westward the descent is at first steep, then slightly undulates. Southward it is steep, then undulates to within 300 yards of the shore, where the ground becomes flat.

On the first undulation from the shore, which is about 55 feet above the level of the sea, nearly true south of the highest point before mentioned, and north 30 degrees west, 520 yards from Cape Agulhas, the Light House is built.

This spot was selected by the Masters of H. M. Ships President, Brilliant, and Rosamond, (Messrs. REES, RUSSEL, and ASHTON,) under the command of Capt. FOOTE, R. N., in conjunction with Lieut.-Colonel MICHELL.

The Light commands to seaward between east and north-west by west or more correctly, east to north 57 degrees 15 minutes west.

Description of the shore.—West of the Agulhas Promontory the shore bends north-westerly, then round to the headland called Gunner's Quoin, forming an irregular shallow incurvation of about 19 miles in breadth. Immediately to the east-north-east of the Promontory are two deep indentations. The first called St. Mungo's Inlet. The next is deeper and wider, and the projection which separates them is called St. Mungo's Point. From the last inlet the shore runs jagged to the dangerous projection called Northumberland Point, the site of the wreck of the ship "Duke of Northumberland," which Point forms the west horn of Struys Bay.

The whole of the beach, from the west of the Agulhas Promontory to Northumberland Point, consists of rugged sand stone and quartz rocks, or rocky reef, perfectly impracticable even for a boat. At the Promontory groups of rock prevail; at the Cape, rocks and rocky reef, extending out a third of a mile. At the inlets, flat rocky reef exposed at low water for a third of a mile; thence rocky to Northumberland Point, where it is sand and reef.

Exposed to the uninterrupted oscillations of the Southern Ocean, the sea breaks heavy on this iron bound shore, particularly during Southern winds. A vessel touching upon it, has not the slightest chance of escaping destruction.

The coast between Northumberland Point, and Struys Point, viz., of Struys Bay, is low and sandy, but a short distance from the beach, there is a line of sand hills varying from 50 to 150 feet in height, some of them covered with dark coloured bush, a feature that distinguishes the coast from Struys Point to the next Point eastward of it. There is no high land sufficiently near to interfere with the distinguishing character of the hills northward of Agulhas, as viewed from the seaward.

Northumberland Point bears east from the Light $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles. It is low and sandy immediately on the beach; but a very dangerous ledge of rocks extends south 37 degrees 30 minutes east, 1 mile from the Point, and a detached rock was fixed by intersection while breaking, which places it south 58 degrees 30 minutes east, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile from the point; and south 81 degrees 40 minutes east, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles from the Light. The extreme of Northumberland Point reef bears south 77 degrees 30 minutes east, $3\frac{3}{4}$ miles nearly from the Light. Westward from the Point the reefs extend about one-third of a mile and break heavily when the wind is from the south-east. In one or two places it breaks further out, but in no place exceeds half a mile.

Struys Point is the outer extreme of a number of sand hills, and as before stated, forms the eastern horn of Struys Bay. It bears from Northumberland Point, which is the western horn N. 79 degrees 30 minutes east, 11 miles (estimated,) and north 82 degrees, 20 minutes east, 15 miles from the Light House. This point is more dangerous than Northumberland Point, inasmuch as the reefs lie much further off the shore, and there is no high land to enable the mariner to determine his position. Circumstances did not allow of this Point being included in the Agulhas survey; but during a strong south-easter it was remarked from the summit of the sand hills near the Point, that the reef extended seaward about 3 miles, and was then breaking with fury.

Like Northumberland Point, the color of the water off this Point changes to seaward from brown to light, then dark green; from which it may be inferred, together with the known shallowness of the water off Northumberland Point, that the Lead as well as the color of the water, will always warn a ship of the approach of danger.

Struys Bay is formed by Struys Point to the east and Northumberland Point to the west. The landing place is in a small bay or cove to the north-west of Northumberland Point, sheltered by a projecting shelf of shingle from each extremity of the cove. The jetty, constructed from pieces of wreck, renders the landing easy; but at the outer horns of the shingle there is only water sufficient for a boat at quarter flood in fine weather. Three or four huts at the head of the jetty, point out its position from the Bay. Immediately in the neighbourhood, on higher ground, is a stone dwelling house, with a signal staff a few yards behind it, termed the telegraph staff on the chart.

3. Instructions for anchoring in Struys Bay, Currents, Tides, &c.

The marks for anchoring are the large stone house near the beach, west $\frac{1}{2}$ south, and the sandy extreme of Northumberland Point south-west by south in 5 fathoms sand. Here the bottom is clear, while to the westward and nearer to the reef where the water is smoother the bottom is foul,—rocks interspersed with patches of sand. The latter is unsafe, the cable is liable to snap from fouling the rocks, an accident that befel H. M. Vessel "Dee," while, lying there in a light south-westerly wind accompanied by the usual swell.

Directions for anchoring.—Vessels from the westward intending to anchor in this bay, should not bring the Light House to bear more westerly than west by north $\frac{1}{2}$ north, until Northumberland Point bears north-west $\frac{1}{2}$ north. Then steer north-north-east or north-east by north, until the stone house before mentioned bears west north-west. This will lead clear of the outer detached reefs off Northumberland Point. Proceed then to north-west, and bring the anchorage marks on.

The light will not be visible from this anchoring ground, owing to the swell of the intervening land.

Precautions respecting Struys Bay.—Shelter may be obtained in this bay during westerly and north-westerly winds only. None is afforded with the wind between south-west, round to the southward and east. With any of the latter winds it is unsafe if not impossible to ride in this bay, for the sea rises to such an extent as to break in 7 or 8 fathoms, a circumstance that was remarked on two occasions while H. M. Steamer "Dee" was standing off waiting for the weather to moderate to enable her to anchor. At the time of anchoring, although the wind had subsided for several hours, the water nearly broke in 7 fathoms where the anchor was let go; and at the place from whence she had put to sea three days before in $4\frac{3}{4}$ fathoms, the sea was breaking heavily. As a general rule, vessels seeking shelter in this bay in a north-west gale, should put to sea immediately after it subsides: for the wind frequently changes in a few hours from a strong north-west to a south-east or south point; in which case it is very difficult to work out in consequence of the heavy sea that rises with these winds.

Currents.—During the examinations of the Coast (September, 1848,) no current was observed in Struys Bay, nor about the coast $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles from the shore, as far to the westward of Agulhas as the letter E. on the chart: but it was confidently asserted by fishermen, and the residents at Struys Bay, that a very strong current frequently sets to the westward round Northumberland Point.

Tides.—Circumstances did not allow of the Tides being observed with due accuracy. Two copper plugs were let into rocks south-west of the Light House to mark the high and low water points nearly at Spring Tides. The comparisons with these plugs on October 15, 16, 18, 19, 28, 29, (1848,) and an observation at the jetty in Struys Bay, on October 29, give the establishment, and rise and fall, nearly similar to what prevails in Table Bay and Simon's Bay.

Magnetic Variation.—This was determined by means of two Magnets, on the flat ground between the Light House and Beach. The result (29 degrees 20 minutes west,) has been employed for the compass bearings, given in these Instructions.

4. Description of the Light Apparatus.

This Light is of the first or most brilliant class, and is the work of Mr. HENRY LE FAUTE. It is constructed upon what is technically called the Dioptric principle.

A hollow cylinder with a paraboloid top of about 19 feet in circumference, and 10 feet in height, is composed (omitting a door way) of 28 horizontal tiers of glass and reflectors, firmly fixed in a metallic frame work of six compartments; so that each tier is divided into six circular segments.

The centre tier is a large hoop-shaped plano-convex lens, 11 inches in depth. Next, 8 tiers of circular prisms above and 8 below the centre lens. Then 7 tiers of reflectors above and 4 tiers below. Three-fourths of the circumference of the cylinder is formed by this combination. The remaining quadrant which is towards the land, and its centre due north, serves for the door way into the cylinder; but the door is lined with two large concave metallic reflectors, each two feet in breadth and three feet in height.

The burner consisting of four concentric Argand Wicks, 4 inches in diameter, is placed in the centre of the cylinder in the focus of the large lens. It is supplied with oil by a force pump driven by clock-work; and there is a simple contrivance, which gives notice by the ringing of a bell when the reservoir requires to be replenished.

The frame work of the Lenticular (the name given to the whole combination) is firmly attached to a cast-iron circular floor, supported by a stem of cast-iron; the lower end of which is let into a block of granite resting upon the crown of the supporting dome, where it (the stone) is surrounded by masonry.

The theory of the Lenticular may be understood, as follows:—The burner being in the focus of the plano-convex lens, the rays of light that impinge upon the inner plane surface, emerge outside horizontal.

The bases of the prisms are perpendicular inside; their upper planes are horizontal, and their hypotenusal planes outside slant downwards and inwards. The depth of each base successively diminishes from 3 inches to $1\frac{1}{8}$ inch in depth, in the order from the centre lens upwards and downwards, which is the order of the increasing inclination of the impinging rays from the burner. The effect of the prismatic form, is to turn the rays, and to send them out horizontal, upon the same principle by which objects in a horizontal direction in front of a Camera Lucida are seen by looking down into it.

The tiers of reflectors commence at the height and depression where the still greater inclination of the impinging rays from the burner would cause a prism to decompose them in the horizontal direction into the prismatic or rainbow colours. The reflectors are concave towards the lens, their curvatures increasing as they recede from the centre lens. They reflect the rays that fall upon them to the prisms, whence they are sent out horizontal.

The two large reflectors behind on the inside of the door return the rays from their direction to the large lens, through which they escape horizontal.

Thus all the light from the burner, save the small quantity that escapes up the chimney glass, is bent into one brilliant horizontal sheet to overspread the horizon.

This splendid specimen of skill is protected by a Lantern $10\frac{1}{2}$ feet in diameter, or 33 feet in circumference, glazed with thick plate glass, and surmounted by a copper dome, from which a lightning conductor of wire rope descends to the ground.

The Light House was planned by Lieut. Colonel Michell, the late talented Surveyor General at the Cape, who made a journey to Paris for the express purpose of selecting the Lenticular Apparatus.

It may be proper to mention, that the Tower of the Light House is to be painted, and will show alternate horizontal bands of white and red, two of each.

Messrs. Rees, Carr, and Skead of H. M. Ships President, Nimrod, and Dee, respectively, particularly Mr. Skead, provided a large portion of the Sailing Instructions. These, with the remainder by myself, I have arranged and compared carefully with the Chart recently constructed from measurement and rigorous trigonometric calculation. The other matter is by myself, and I hold myself responsible for the accuracy of the whole.

I may add, that one of the trigonometric stations in the measurement of the Arc of the Meridian is on the highest point of the hill above the Light House; by means of which, the Latitude and Longitude of the Light House are derived from the position of the Observatory. Thus the Light is an exact Geographical Point.
