That in order to facilitate the due delivery and despatch of Mails, all Mail Boats are to have a preference of berths alongside of vessels and wharves.

The Contractor may not, under any pretence, use this privilege for his own private advantage, but only for the purpose of shipping and landing the Mails.

SAILING DIRECTIONS FOR PORTLAND
BAY, PORT FAIRY, AND PORT AL-BERT, IN THE COLONY OF VICTORIA.

HIS Excellency the Officer administering the Government has been pleased to direct the publication of the following Sailing Directions for general information.

By His Excellency's Command,
J. MOORE,
Assistant Colonial Secretary.

SAILING DIRECTIONS FOR PORTLAND BAY.—BY JAMES FAWTHROP, HARBOR MASTER.

1. Ships bound to Portland, and making the land from the westward, should endeavour to sight the high land of Cape Bridgewater, Cape Nelson, and Cape Grant. These Capes, at a distance of four or five leagues, as seen from the south-westward, form a cluster of high bold land, the western part being covered with large white sand patches, the centre high table land (Cape Nelson) and the eastern part (Cape Grant) trending low. This eastern part of the cluster forms the southern extremity of Portland Bay, and it is fronted to the S.E. by a small group of high rocks named the Laurence Isles; these will not be visible until within five or six miles, being hid by the high land of Cape Grant. These rocks extend rather more than two miles to the eastward of Cape Grant, and about a mile to the S.E. of a low point named Point Danger; there is a passage between, but it is very narrow, and close to the western side of the Laurence Isles. This passage should never be attempted, for it is full of sunken rocks, on which the sea breaks in southerly and south-west gales. Ships should therefore round the Laurence Isles, passing to the eastward at a convenient distance, and then hauling up to the north-westward should the wind prove scant. As they proceed to the northward, the houses of the town of Portland will begin to open up Observatory Point, which forms the southern point of an indent in this part of the bay, about a mile in extent. Fronting the town, the soundings will be eight or nine fathoms; crossing the bay, if the wind is scant, as before stated, ships may pass to the northward of the town until it bears S.W., then tack: the soundings will gradually decrease as they approach the shore, and a heavy ship may anchor about a mile from the town in seven fathoms. They should bring the jetty to bear west by south, and the Laurence Isles S.E. by S., magnetic.

2. The bay is very capacious, and by keeping the Laurence Isles on a S.E. by S. line of bearing, vessels will have three miles of clear anchorage ground to the northward of the town, and two miles to the southward of Blacknose Point, the limit of the Quarantine Ground. No hidden danger is known to exist in the bay but the sunken reef off Whalers' Bluff. The northern extremity of the town: This part is a range of high lime-stone cliffs, and from which the reef bears east about a quarter of a mile; on it there are eight feet of water, and it is of small extent, having a deep channel between; and the bluff from this point of the land trends to the north-westward, forming a second indent of about two miles in extent, with good anchorage and regular soundings. The land from that continues to trend to the north eastward for about six miles, and then bends to the eastward. At this part it is distant from the Laurence Isles about twelve miles. This may be considered the extent of the bay in that direction; but there is ample space on the S.W. quadrant of the bay for any number of vessels to anchor in any depth of water suitable to size.

3. Ships bound to Portland, and coming from the eastward, should endeavour to sight the Julia Percy Island. It may be passed within half a mile, and from that position, in clear weather, will be seen the high land of Mount Clay, which forms the north-east boundary of Portland Bay. The high land of Cape Nelson will also be visible, which forms the southern boundary of the Bay. A clear passage may be found between the island and the main of three miles wide; but it is not advisable for large vessels to pass inside, for a heavy swell from the south-west generally rolls in upon the coast, and frequent calms in summer make it unsafe, for the whole coast is fringed by a belt of dangerous rocks, with deep water close to the shore, on which a continual surf breaks. The latitude of this island may be assumed as 38d. 26m. south, southern extreme, and longitude 142d. 3m. east. The latitude of the anchorage at Portland, from a number of observations, may be stated 38d. 21m. 30s. south, and the longitude from Chior, regulated at Port Dalrymple, and several short runs, gives the anchorage 141d. 38m. 45s. east.

Commanders of ships may, without danger, provided the land has been made out before dark, stand safely into the bay, keeping the lights of the town, which will be visible five or six miles, between the bearings of S.W. and N.N.W., which will give ample room and smooth water for working until daylight or till they are boarded—a boat will always be in readiness to afford assistance when required.

The various headlands, on approaching this part of coast, are very conspicuous, and cannot easily be mistaken. The time of tide is very uncertain, being much influenced by southerly winds; but in fine weather, a regular tide runs along the whole coast from Cape Otway to Cape Bridgewater, the flood setting so the westward. Betwixt Cape Bridgewater and Cape Northumberland the tides meet, and, in strong weather, create a very turbulent sea. The rise and fall of tides at Portland may be considered as four feet, and the time of high water at full and change days twelve hours, the variation 10d. easterly.

SAILING DIRECTIONS FOR PORT FAIRY.—BY MR. J. B. MILLS, HARBOR MASTER.

Leading marks for making and entering Port Fairy, in latitude 38d. 23m. south, longitude 142d. 20m. east.

In making Port Fairy from the south or south-east, the first remarkable land seen is a hill on Griffith's Island, which forms a saddle, standing S.W. and N.E., the highest part to the S.W. This hill lies S.S.W. of the anchorage, a short mile, and cannot be mistaken for any other land, and it is much higher and lies outside the line of coast.

West by south $\frac{3}{4}$ south thirteen miles, is the Lady Julia Percy Island, lying five miles off shore. It has a table appearance and is very steep.

Nine miles N.E. $\frac{1}{2}$ E. from the Saddle Hill, is some moderately high land, which, when seen from seaward has a table appearance, and may always be known by a round peaked hill, lying close to its westernmost extremity, and may be seen twenty miles at sea, the Saddle Hill twelve miles, and the Julia Percy sixteen miles, in clear weather. The coast for seven miles east and west of Belfast, is low and grassy, and to the westward sloping down to the sea with a few clumps of trees, while that to the eastward, being bare of timber, cannot be seen more than nine or ten miles from a ship's deck, in the clearest weather.

Port Fairy Bay is open from south to east, and is about three miles wide by one and a quarter deep.

The anchorage is in the S.W. end of the bay.

Directions for vessels entering Port Fairy.

After making out the Saddle Hill steer so as to pass half a mile to the eastward of a low rocky island, bearing from Saddle Hill N.E. by E., distant about three-quarters of a mile, which has a reef extending from it about one-eighth of a mile N.E. by E. which is all covered at high tide, and always breaking when there is any swell. It may always be known in fine weather by the kelp on the surface of the water. In passing this island may be seen a windmill, on the south side of the town of Belfast; also a flag-staff on a high sand hummock, lying W.S.W. from the anchorage. As soon as the mill opens clear, steer N.W. into the Bay, until the flagstaff and mill be brought in a line. The soundings then will be five and a half or six fathoms water with a bottom of very fine dark sand. The water shoals gradually from this towards the flag-staff, and the best berth is when the mill is within a quarter of a point open to the westward.

The above directions are for the outer anchorage, are for vessels drawing thirteen feet or upward: smaller vessels can, of course, lay further in towards the flagstaff.

N.B. It is dangerous for strangers to approach Port Fairy by night, the land being so very low and the water shoaling suddenly in shore. These bearings are all magnetic.

The undermentioned moorings have recently been laid down in Port Fairy, with the following bearings:—

1. An anchor weighing 25 $\frac{1}{2}$ cwt. with ninety fathoms of 15-8in. chain: the Flagstaff on Victoria Hummocks, and the Windmill on the south end of the town of Belfast in a line, and bearing W.S.W., also in a line with two direction staffs on the N.W. side of the bay, which bear N.W. and S.E. from each other. This mooring is in 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ fathoms, and about half a mile from the mouth of the river Moyne, the centre of which bears S.W.

2. Second mooring: an anchor weighing 20 cwt. with ninety fathoms 15-8in. chain. This mooring lies S.W. by W. from the first described, and is in 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ fathoms water.

3. Third mooring: an anchor weighing 15 $\frac{1}{2}$ cwt. with ninety fathoms 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. chain. This mooring is about two hundred fathoms S.S.W. from the first mentioned, and is in 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ fathoms water. To each of these moorings is attached a barrel buoy painted red.

SAILING DIRECTIONS FOR PORT ALBERT.—BY MR. DAVID FERMANER, HARBOR MASTER.

Sailing directions for the entrance of Sylvanus Channel, Port Albert.

In approaching Port Albert from the N.E. care should be taken to run down along the shore, from three to four miles off, until you get the north Seal Island to bear S. by E., then steer for the highest white sand hummock on La Trobe Island. The depth of water will be from seven fathoms, shoaling gradually to two and a half fathoms close in on the beach of La Trobe Island, where you will see the outer red buoy, which, with the other red buoys, must be left on the starboard hand, and the black buoys on the port hand.

In coming down from the Promontory, care should be taken not to shut Rodunda Island in with the end of the Promontory, but just close it.

Bearings taken from the outer red buoy.

Mount Hunter S.W. by W., Rabbit Island S.S.W., North Seal Island S. $\frac{1}{2}$ E., Rodunda Island S. by W.; course in from the first red buoy to the second, E.N.E.; from the second to the third, N.N.E.

Through the Sylvanus Channel the depth of water is from 9 to 10 feet at half tide, earlier than which no vessel should take it; when past the third red buoy the depth of water will be from 10 fathoms to 2½ fathoms up to the port, leaving the buoys the same as in the Sylvanus Channel, the red on the starboard and the black on the port hand.

High water on the bar at full and change, 11 h. 40 m.: the bearings and courses are by compass.
