EDWARD COHEN,
Commissioner of Trade and Customs.

Department of Trade and Customs,
Melbourne, 5th November 1872.

The Treasury, New South Wales,
9th October 1872.

THE following hydrographical information, collected by Captain Moresby during the recent cruise of H.M.S. Basilisk, has been supplied by the Commodore Commanding the Station, and is published for general information.

SAUL SAMUEL.

HYDROGRAPHICAL INFORMATION.

Keppel and Boscawen Islands.

On the evening of the 21st of June H.M.S. Basilisk was steering for Keppel Island, the centre hill of that island bearing N.E. by E. 9 or 10 miles, the centre of Boscawen Island bore N.E. about 16 miles; it was thus evident that one or both of these islands are wrongly placed on the chart.

On the following day (22nd June), whilst the Basilisk was hove-to between Keppel and Boscawen Islands, sights were taken, giving the position of the ship as follows:—At noon, latitude $15^{\circ} 54'$ south, longitude $173^{\circ} 59'$ west, the bearings of the centre of Keppel Island being S.W. by S. 3 miles and the centre of Boscawen Island N. by W. $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles; proving that Keppel Island was correctly placed on the chart, but that Boscawen Island instead of being 6' or 7' N.E. by E. of Keppel Island is about the same distance nearly due north (true).

On the same day, when the north point of the centre hill of Keppel Island bore S.S.W. $4'$, the ship going about 2 knots through the water, got two casts of the hand-lead in 15 fathoms (rock); on trying with the deep-sea lead no bottom at 100 fathoms. The surf breaks heavily on the south shore of Keppel Island. On the north shore there is a very extensive coral reef with a lagoon inside; the passage, by which the Basilisk's boats entered piloted by a native, was not accessible for ships of any size, nor does there appear to be any safe anchorage off the island.

This island, together with Boscawen, is subject to King George of Tonga, and contains a population of about 1000, all Protestant Christians; a governor from Tonga and native missionary reside on the island. Cocoanuts, yams, plantains, and pigs are in great abundance.

A dangerous coral reef extends for about a mile off the S.W. end of the island. Boscawen Island has only one small village on it.

Uina-fu or Good Hope Island.

The remarks of Captain Chas. W. Hope, of H.M.S. Brisk, on this island, leave little to be added. We judge the extent of the island to be quite 5 miles N.N.E. and S.S.W. The lava cliffs which surround the island on all sides render, in unsettled weather, landing difficult. The principal landing place is under the village (on the N.E. side of the island), marked by a flag-staff; it is a precarious one (except in still weather) under the lee of an out-jutting mass of rock; the Basilisk's boats attempted to land here, with a fresh breeze from N. by E., but could not succeed; about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles from this to the east, a large mass of lava rock projects about 80 yards and curves round towards another small projection of rock, forming a snug boat harbor, where, except at high spring tides, when the rocks would be covered sufficiently to let the surf roll over, boats may lay in safety. From this landing place to the principal village, where the governor lives, is about four miles, the first part over sharp lava rocks and stones. The schooners which trade to the island for the cocoanut oil anchor off the first-named landing place, close in, in 15 fathoms, but they give the anchorage a very bad name.

I believe there is no safe anchorage for large ships. No water except rain water exists on the island, but in seasons of drought a small quantity of brackish water is obtained from one of the three small islets which exist in the great lagoon in the centre of the island.

Uoena or Wallis Island.

I beg to enclose a tolerably correct outline copy of a survey of this island and the coral reef surrounding it, made by a French naval officer some twenty years ago, but which I believe has never been published. The coral patches, depth of water, detached rocks, and hidden dangers inside the great reef are not shown. It is believed that a passage for large ships to sail completely round the island exists, with anchorage at any part. Of the four entrances through the reef, three are reported available for large ships, viz., those marked A, B, and C; but the best entrance, and that which hitherto has been solely used, is the southern one, referred to in the Sailing Directions, and also by Captain C. W. Hope, whose remarks I entirely confirm.

The inhabitants of the island are exclusively Roman Catholics, and are governed by a native queen.

Fortuna or Hoorne Island.

The channel between this island and Alofi is about a mile in width between the reefs; a S.W. and N.E. course leads right through. The Basilisk passed through under sail, with the wind from E.S.E.; it fell light when under the high land, but did not change its direction. The tides were neap, but what current there was appeared to set directly through. After clearing the channel, the principal village and a large Roman Catholic church are seen, situated in cocoanut and bread-fruit tree groves extending for four or five miles along the coast, the entire length of which is fringed by a flat shore reef, on which the surf with the prevailing winds breaks heavily. The Basilisk's boats were unable to land; canoes passed readily through the surf with passengers, but in returning to the boats they were repeatedly swamped. The eastern portion of the island is the residence of the principal part of the inhabitants, under the government of King Aera. His Majesty exercises a real authority, but has nothing to distinguish him in house, dress, or appearance from the meanness of his subjects. The eastern portion of the island is governed by King Alphonsi; both kings, as well as all their subjects, are Roman Catholics and friendly disposed. The Basilisk, not having time, did not enter the harbor, which is situated on the S.W. part of the island, but when hove-to off its entrance we were boarded by a German resident who offered his services as pilot. From him we learnt the following information:—

That the entrance of the harbor is open to the S.W., but perfectly sheltered from all other winds; it is comparatively easy of access, but some sunken patches of coral render the services of a pilot advisable. A large white cross is placed on the south side of the harbor on a hill, to guide vessels in. The anchorage is on a sandy bottom, with 6 to 8 fathoms from 100 to 200 yards from the shore; at 400 yards there is 18 fathoms. Very few inhabitants live on the northern side of the island.

Rotumah Island.

Strangers looking for the anchorages at Rotumah are likely to experience some difficulty from no approximate height of the outlying islands being given; this is especially the case when making the land from the eastward. Emery Island (a bold bluff, conical islet, about 700 feet in height, and bearing a striking resemblance to the high wooded bluff that marks the western extreme of Lec Bay), is then shut in with the main land, and may be easily mistaken for the bluff itself.

N.E. Roadstead and Lec Bay.

The following were the anchorage bearings of the Basilisk, in the N.E. Roadstead:—Ship's head E. $\frac{1}{2}$ N., outer islet N.E. by E., and Emery Island W. $\frac{1}{2}$ N., 94 fathoms (sand). In this position, with a strong trade-wind blowing, the water was perfectly smooth, and we were able to water ship in bulk from good wells and a smooth sandy beach. At the same time, in Lec Bay, a considerable swell was rolling in, and from the fact of that bay having an extensive shore reef extending right across the bight of the bay which prevents a boat landing at low water, and if a surf should be setting in makes communication with the shore uncertain, I consider that at all seasons when the trade-wind may be depended upon the N.E. Roadstead is to be preferred to Lec Bay; the latter has the advantage that, if the wind should be blowing from the northward or westward, a sailing vessel would more readily clear the land. In making Lec Bay, ships must avoid closing the eastern point, as off it extends an extensive reef.

Care also must be taken, when making the land from the eastward, to distinguish the two islets off the N.E. Roadstead from two very similar islets off the eastern extreme of Rotumah Island; these small islets are from 150 to 200 feet in height and covered with cocoanut trees.

Mitchell Group.

This cluster of eleven or twelve islets are situated on a coral reef which completely surrounds a shoal lagoon, in extent about 5 miles north and south and about 2 miles east and west. A shore reef attaches itself to all the islands, which renders the landing for European boats a hazardous operation; even the native canoes are frequently capsized. There is no passage into the lagoon for ships, but a precarious anchorage may be obtained off the reef on the lee side in fine weather. The principal village and the best landing place is on the W.S.W. side of the island, and may be known by a neat whitewashed church, which, when abreast of the islet, may be seen through the trees. Canoes come off readily to the ship. A small quantity of brackish water may be obtained. The natives, about 70 in number, are all cleanly, inoffensive, and Protestants. A white man is resident on the island.

Fanufuti or Ellice Island.

The remarks on this cluster of islets in the South Pacific Directory are correct. It may be added that the chain consists of thirty islets, one of which only, Fanufuti, is permanently inhabited; it is situated on the N.E. quarter of the reef, and is from 8 to 10 miles in length, but exceedingly narrow. The natives report (and it is confirmed by a white man resident on the island) that two large safe ship channels exist on the east side of the reef; and these have the great advantage of making the prevailing easterly winds fair for entering the lagoon, whilst from the western entrances it is (with an easterly wind) a dead beat of eight or nine miles to the anchorage off the village. The lagoon is of great extent and possesses working room for any number of ships. All dangers are clearly discoverable in daylight, out of the glare of the sun. A small supply of brackish water exists on the island. The number of natives is about 140—very quiet pleasant people and Protestants. Since writing the above we have received the plan of this group from the Admiralty. It appears very incorrect.

Nukufetau or Peyster Island.

To the description of these islets in the South Pacific Directory may be added—that the group consists of eight or nine islets situated on a reef of some 9 miles in diameter. The village is on the west side of the reef near the entrance to the lagoon, and is the only permanently inhabited one on the island. The whitewashed church, school, and native teachers' houses, are only visible from the north and west side of the group. The inhabitants are Protestants.

We found the tide in the ship channel running out of the lagoon from 4 to 5 knots.

By a misprint at page 548 of the South Pacific Directory, the latitude of this island is stated to be 7 degrees 26 minutes 11 seconds south; whereas by reference to the table of positions, page iv., Ellice Group, the correct latitude is given 7 degrees 56 minutes 11 seconds south.

Netherland or Eey Island.

In the South Pacific Directory the form of the reef is correctly described as a crescent, the islets, six or seven in number, being situated on its circumference; the N.W. and S.W. horns of the crescent are joined by a long connecting reef through which there is no passage. The village, together with the church and schoolhouse, are on the S.W. islet. No other islet is permanently inhabited, but a sanatorium for the islanders exists on the south side of the group; they can be seen from the sea and must not be mistaken for the village. European boats would generally find a difficulty in landing. The inhabitants are about 200 in number, all Protestants.

Speiden or Lynx Island.

We found this island to be 20 miles S. 78° W. of its position on the chart. Our course and distance made good from Eey Island to Lynx Island was N. 9° E. 60 miles, whereas the course and distance between the two islands on the chart is N. 25° E. 69 miles; again, on the following day our course and distance made good from Lynx Island to Hudson Island was S. 81° W. 64 miles, whereas the course and distance as they are placed on the chart is S. 83° W. 80 miles, thus proving that its position on the chart is not correct. To the short description given in the South Pacific Directory may be added—That the island is about 2½ miles long by 1½ broad, densely covered with coconut trees. A narrow shore reef extends all round the island, on which a heavy surf runs, rendering landing impossible except for canoes. The population consists of 417 souls, governed by a king and a chief. The missionaries have recently landed on the island, and about half the natives are Christians, the rest are devil-worshippers. A small quantity of brackish water which filters into their wells at high tide is the only water on the island. The people are quiet and inoffensive. The village is on the west side of the island. Pigs and fowls are plentiful.

Hudson Island.

To the description of this island in the South Pacific Directory, page 529, may be added—That a narrow shore reef with an unusually precipitous face to seaward extends round the island, rendering landing difficult. Native missionary Protestant teachers are here established. The village is on the west side.

Gran Coccol.

After a careful search for this island in clear favorable weather, passing over the position assigned it on the chart, I am of opinion it does not exist. At St. Augustine Island I learnt from an English sailor resident there that as an island it did not exist, but there was an extensive shoal 3 or 4 miles in circumference, somewhere between St. Augustine and Hudson Islands, with from 5 to 7 fathoms water, on which in heavy weather the sea breaks. The man stated that he had frequently sailed over this shoal and seen the bottom.

St. Augustine Island.

The description of these three islets in the South Pacific Ocean Directory is very meagre and incorrect. They consist of a coral reef of an extended crescent form, with the two principal islets on the N.W. and S.E. horns; a third very small islet lies between them. Reefs half a mile in extent run off the S.E. and N.W. extremes of the island. The village is on the eastern side of the S.E. islet, off which extends a broad shore reef springing up as a wall of coral from the depths of the ocean; on this the sea breaks furiously; at intervals the surf, it is said, subsides so as to allow European boats to land. The population is about 450; they have steadily resisted the introduction of missionaries, and are all devil-worshippers, with an evil reputation for stealing and treachery.

General remarks.—It is to be noted that when hove-to off the islands in the Ellice Group, there was always so strong an equatorial current setting to the west, that it was with great difficulty the ship could be kept near the land. With the exception of Speiden or Lynx Island we found the position of the Ellice and Mitchell Islands tolerably correct. They are all low and flat, the tops of the coconut trees being from 60 to 80 feet above the water.

Cherry Island.

The extent of this island in any direction does not appear more than 1½ mile. The hill which rises at its north end to about 350 feet, appears at a distance bare, but is well cultivated. The spurs of the hill slope down to a fertile and beautifully wooded valley, where the natives live in low neat houses amongst the trees. The population is about 200; they are very timid, quiet, inoffensive people, and supplied us liberally with fruits and roots. They appear to have neither pigs or fowls. No missionaries have as yet been amongst them.

The description of the dangers of this island in the South Pacific Directory is not correct. It should be as follows:—At the distance of a mile from its southern end is a rock a few feet above water, which is joined to the island by a rocky bank. At a quarter of a mile outside the above-mentioned rock is an apparently isolated sunken rock, on which in rough weather the sea breaks heavily.

The Basilisk rounded the north end of the island within 600 or 700 yards, and saw no shoal, the only danger being a rock off the north end about 300 yards from the bluff. Immediately after passing the north point, the Basilisk came upon a very extensive coral bank, which was found to extend on a N.W. bearing from the island for fully four miles, carrying a depth of from 19 to 12½ fathoms (coarse white sand), the shoal water being the furthest from the island. On this bank anchorage may be obtained, in moderate weather, during the season of the S.E. trades. A long spit appears to extend from the S.W. side of the island. Landing in a canoe is easy in moderate weather, but not recommended for European boats.

Vessels, in making the island from the eastward, are recommended to round the north point; the landing place is on the west side.

Duff Group.

The Basilisk anchored off Disappointment Island on 31st July, in 10½ fathoms, on the following bearings:—Village N.E. ¼ N., southern islet E. ¼ S., about 1½ mile from the shore, having 4 fathoms two ships-lengths further in. With a light N.E. breeze, the anchor (stream) dragged off this bank into 100 fathoms no bottom. Several such coral banks, with very deep water between them, were found inside of the anchorage. Disappointment Island is the only permanently inhabited island of the group. The village is situated on the S.W. side of the island, and is visible at a considerable distance, being built on a small flat coral islet about 200 yards in diameter, separated from the mainland by a narrow lagoon. A coral wall is built round this islet, and coconut trees grow between the houses. A shore reef has to be crossed to effect a landing, which is generally impracticable for European boats. The natives are in number about 350. They are of good stature, but exceedingly thin and ugly, all armed with efficient bows and poisoned arrows; they have also large war canoes. They were at first shy, but soon gained confidence and became friendly.

Santa Cruz Island.

It should be noted that the delineation of Carlisle Bay is incorrect in chart No. 17 Santa Cruz Islands. It is there represented to be a bay lying north and south, and so similar to Byron Bay that vessels from the northward and eastward are liable to mistake the one for the other, and run past Byron Bay before finding their error. On no point of bearing can Carlisle Bay have the appearance of Byron Bay, as it is represented in D'Urville's Chart; in fact it is not a bay, but a lagoon, inside a coral reef, entered by a ship passage, and may be known by a small wooded islet on the reef to the westward of the entrance, also by two or three native houses which stand on the beach opposite the entrance.

When inside, the lagoon runs away W.S.W. and apparently forms a perfectly sheltered anchorage for large vessels until past the islet referred to above, when it shoals.

It is a short mile from the west point of Carlisle Bay to the east point of Byron Bay; good water may be obtained in Carlisle Bay close to the village. The fresh water in Byron Bay has been reported not good, but this can only be the case when the water is taken too near the beach. About 160 yards of hose is required, and if led (on a small beaten track) in a north and south direction through the bush to where the water is a clear rapid mountain stream, better water could not be obtained anywhere.

Tapoua or Edgcombe Island.

For 3 or 4 miles on the N.W. side of the island the circling coral reef is sunken, with from 1 to 2 fathoms water, upon which the sea does not break except in heavy weather. Further to the S.W. the reef becomes awash, and is in some places over 2½ miles from the shore. On the west side is a remarkable indentation or large bay running into the island. Off this bay (which I have called Basilisk Harbor, and have the honor to enclose a rough plan made by us from a running survey) we found a 4-fathom passage leading into the extensive lagoon inside, where anchorage may be found when near the outer reef in from 10 to 14 fathoms; the water then deepens and without any apparent danger carries a depth of 20 to 40 fathoms right into Basilisk Harbor, which has from 25 to 30 fathoms (sand and mud) in mid-channel. The distance from the circling or outside reef to the entrance of Basilisk Harbor is about 2½ miles, and the entire length of Basilisk Harbor is about 2 miles in an N.E. by E. and S.W. by W. direction, exclusive of the extensive bays which branch off from its head in a north and south direction.

The 4-fathom channel through the reef reported above will be found close to the southern spit of the entrance; but until a proper survey is published, no ship should attempt it without having most carefully examined the passage for herself, as patches of coral rock give uncertain soundings in all directions, and very much embarrass the navigation.

Vanikoro or La Perouse Island.

The Basilisk anchored in Tevai or Bayley's Bay, on 7th August 1872. The survey of the island by D'Urville renders the approach to the bay easy, but the directions in the South Pacific Directory are more than usually obscure, in as much as the names of islands headlands given in the directory do not occur in the chart. Taking the chart as a standard, the directions for entering the bay (Tevai) should be as follows:—When in the centre of the channel leading to Tevai Bay, steer W. ¼ S. for Dillon (Direction) Island, which is difficult to make out, being surrounded by high land, but may be known by its not being more than 300 or 400 yards in length, and having an abrupt elevation about 250 feet in height.

When the eastern bluff point of Tevai Bay bears S. by W. steer S.W. ¼ S. for the anchorage, passing between the two reefs, awash at half tide (Deceitful and Treacherous Reefs), anchoring about 1 cable from the shore in about 20 fathoms (mud); a shore reef fringes the bight of the bay.

Indifferent water can be obtained from two streams, but only with difficulty, at low-water; at other times the streams are overflowed by the saltwater. A dangerous looking extent of discolored water was observed on the south shore to the east of Tevai Bay.

Torres Islands.

To the remarks of Navigating Lieutenant T. C. Tilly, R.N., on this group, may be added—During the prevalence of the

S.E. trades anchorage can be found on the lee side of all these islands, in about 20 fathoms, at a 1/4 or 1/2 a mile from the shore; but it is recommended a boat should be sent in first to pick out a sandy or mud bottom.

About 1 1/2 mile off the P.N.E. coast of Middle Island, with the channel between that island and the small 600 feet islet open, the Basilisk passed over several coral patches on which we found 6 fathoms, but shoaler water may be found.

Hayter Bay (see accompanying plan) has a snug anchorage in 16 fathoms, about half a mile from the shore; an out-lying reef (between which and the main land an apparently deep water channel exists) forming an additional shelter from S.W. We found no fresh water here. The natives are suspicious and difficult to approach—at Middle Island more so than at the others. They all followed the plan of a few natives approaching cautiously, whilst large numbers remained hidden in the bush with their bows and arrows ready for instant use. Their bows and arrows (with barbs of human bones) are very neatly made, and appear very effective.

A westerly current was experienced off these islands.

Espiritu Santo Island.

Navigating Lieutenant Tilly remarks that St. Philip's (or St. Iago) Bay is not so deep as it appears on the chart. Rounding Cape Quiros, from which Cape Cumberland cannot be seen, it would appear so, but from Cape Cumberland the depth of the bay slightly exceeds that on the chart. Jordan River has a shifting bar, and is at times inaccessible for large boats, but by leading a hose to the river over the beach water could, in moderate weather, be always obtained. Good duck-shooting is to be found in the river and swamps. Natives friendly.

Three Hills, Mota, Valua Reef, Bligh, and Vanua-Lava and Star Peak Islands.

All these islands are ably described by Navigating Lieutenant T. C. Tilly, R.N.

St. Maria Island.

In addition to the anchorage mentioned by Navigating Lieutenant Tilly, in his remarks on this island, there is an anchorage for a small craft immediately to the south of East Point. A passage 50 or 60 yards wide, with 7 or 8 fathoms depth of water through the reef, leads to it; but it is patchy inside. Vessels running in for shelter should anchor directly they strike 5 fathoms, when inside the reef. The circling reef round St. Maria does not extend so far to the S.E. as shown on the chart.

Natives numerous and friendly.

Aurora Island.

H.M.S. Basilisk found good anchorage and shelter from a strong "Lau Sun," or S.E. gale off Laka-rere, in the positions pointed out by Navigating Lieutenant Tilly. Natives shy and distrustful, not inclined to barter, must be approached with caution.

Aoba or Laper's Island.

Very strong tides and rocks are found in the channel on its western side between this island and Aurora Island. Natives on the north shore numerous and quite friendly.

Pentecost Island.

Found the natives numerous, friendly, and ready to barter:

Ambrym Island.

Basilisk anchored in Rodd's anchorage on 21st August. Found it a good roadstead, soundings regular, with good holding ground. Natives friendly.

Loperi Island.

A heavy surf rolls all round this remarkable volcanic island, rendering it difficult to land. Natives friendly.

Mallicoilo Island.

Sandwich Harbor.—The Erskin River cannot be recommended as a watering place, being a sluggish river, affected by the tide to a considerable distance from the mouth, and can only be entered by a boat at high tide or 1/4-flood. Natives friendly.

Api Island.

Kambioka Bay (S.E. end of the island). Found no natives in this bay. Landing is difficult. An extensive lagoon, with quantities of wild-duck, is near the beach.

Natives friendly.

Two Hills Island.

Landing difficult. The Basilisk's boats were swamped in the surf. Natives friendly. A native teacher is settled amongst them.

Erromango Island, Polenia Bay.

The Basilisk found a good anchorage in the S.W. extreme of this bay during a strong trade wind. Soundings leading in are very regular, gradually shoaling from 14 fathoms to 5 fathoms (B Sand), about one mile from the shore. At the head of the bay, under the protection of a small coral reef, a smooth landing place for boats may be found. A plan of this anchorage, made by Navigating Lieutenant T. L. Mourilyan, is enclosed.

General remarks.—The natives, although inoffensive in the presence of a man-of-war, should, nevertheless, be approached with great caution in a small unarmed vessel.

J. MORREBY,
Captain.

I concur in the above remarks—
T. L. MOURILYAN,
Nav. Lieutenant.
