I am glad to inform you that there was no breaking out of any disease among sheep in this district during the quarter. There are no licensed nor quarantined sheep in the district, and the flocks are apparently quite free from scab.

M. M. McEACHERN.

Benalla, 30th September 1874.

GEELONG DISTRICT.

I HAVE the honor to hand this my report of the district for the quarter ending this day.

I am glad to be able to state that it continues clean. I prosecuted Alexr. McLean, of Oudit, for neglecting to brand his sheep.

JAMES RILEY.

St. Helens, Geelong West, 30th September 1874.

GIFFSAND DISTRICT.

IN compliance with the 12th section of the Scab in Sheep Act 1870, I have the honor to report my district still a clean district, and free from the scab disease. No sheep under quarantine.

JNO. M. ALLAN.

I HAVE the honor to forward my report on the state of the Hamilton Scab District for the quarter ending 30th September 1874.

I have also the honor to inform you that the stations on the South Australian border, forming the No. 2 Hamilton District, still remains clean.

ROBT. KERR.

Hamilton, 1st October 1874.

HEXHAM DISTRICT.

I HAVE the honor to report, as required by clause 12 of The Scab Act 1870, that this district remains free from scab.

MICHAEL DUGAN.

Warrnambool, 30th September 1874.

KILMORE DISTRICT.

I HAVE the honor to report as follows as to the state of scab in the Kilmore District for the quarter ending September 30th:—

I have issued a license to Mr. Cameron, of Balleston, for 1,400 ewes and lambs. As two dreadfully scabby sheep with Mr. Gunn's ear mark were found amongst them in the Buffalo Paddock, near Murchison, where the flock was running, I inspected the remainder of the sheep on this run, and found them to all appearance clean; I also inspected the Waranga and Protectorate sheep, the property of Mr. Gunn, and believe them to be perfectly clean. My impression is that these scabby stragglers have been lurking since last shearing on some farm in one of the bends of the Goulburn River, and been tempted out by finding sheep in this paddock that has been kept idle purposely for the last two years till lately. As there is a large extent of wild scrubby country on these three runs, it will be some time before they are entirely free from danger.

I had two prosecutions before the Rushworth Bench, in which convictions were obtained: John White, under section 65, fined £80, and David Dunn, section 22, fined £5.

Mr. John Winter's estate, Colbinabbin, and Mr. Geo. Groves' runs, Gobarup and Colbinabbin South, have been released from quarantine, so that there are at present only three runs—Balleston, Waranga Park, and Protectorate—in quarantine, with 14,000 sheep.

Mr. Gunn has made application to have his Waranga Park and Protectorate runs released from quarantine; but, owing to this outbreak of scab on Balleston, occasioned by stragglers from his runs, I shall not recommend it.

All the sheep in the district are looking particularly well, and the lambing has been very successful. The shearing has begun on some stations to the north, and promises a heavy clip.

Fluke seems to have done very little damage on the few stations subject to it, mainly attributable to the mildness of the winter and plentiful supply of grass.

W. H. STEPHEN.

Kilmore, 5th October 1874.

MANSFIELD DISTRICT.

I HAVE the honor to forward my report for the quarter ending 30th September.

There are no sheep under license. I regret, however, to state that Messrs. McColl have not succeeded in cleaning their sheep kept on the Acheron run, as scab has again shown during the winter months; fortunately the run is safely bounded by the Rivers Goulburn, Acheron, and Rubicon, so that there is little risk of the disease extending; and, as the scab is now confined to this run with only 5,000 sheep, I hope that, after the approaching shearing season, the disease will be entirely eradicated.

During the quarter I have inspected all the sheep in quarantine, and, with the exception of the Acheron, I found the sheep on the other runs clean and looking healthy.

No sheep have been released from quarantine during the quarter. The number now in the quarantine district is 35,000.

WM. H. McWILLIAM.

Mansfield, 2nd October 1874.

MELBOURNE DISTRICT.

I HAVE the honor to report on the state of the Melbourne district as regards scab, for the quarter ending 30th September 1874.

There has been no outbreak of disease during that period.

JAMES FENTON SHAW.

Office of Inspector of Sheep,
Melbourne, 1st October 1874.

SANDHURST DISTRICT.

I HAVE the honor to forward my quarterly report as directed by The Scab Act 1870, clause 12.

On visiting Clunes, on 11th July, I found that the two small farms, of fifty acres each, which constituted the land in quarantine near that town, had been free from disease for upwards of three years, and I am happy to report are now erased from the Gazette as land in quarantine.

In all other respects this district remains in the same state as described in my last quarterly report, of 1st July.

During the quarter no sheep have been placed in quarantine.

MATTHEW HERVEY.

Castlemaine, 1st October 1874.

SEYMOUR DISTRICT.

As required by the The Scab Act 1870, I have the honor to furnish the following report for the quarter ending 30th September:—

In the end of July I found scab in a small flock of sheep owned by E. Shelton, of Avenel, running at Four Mile Creek, near Avenel. They were twice carefully dipped within thirteen days in tobacco and sulphur, and as yet show no appearance of further breaking.

With the exception of Shelton's, all the sheep inspected during the quarter are apparently clean.

There are 36,000 sheep at present in quarantine. None have been released or placed in quarantine during the quarter.

ROBERT STIRLING.

Seymour, 1st October 1874.

WIMMERA DISTRICT.

I HAVE the honor to forward quarterly report to 30th September, in accordance with Scab Act. The whole of the Wimmera District has remained clean during that time. Fluke is gradually extending over the district, principally in consequence of diseased sheep being brought into it. The Board of Advice has met once during the quarter.

WILLIAM SPURLING.

Stawell, 1st October 1874.

HYDROGRAPHIC NOTICE.

ISLANDS OFF THE EAST COAST OF NEW GUINEA.

Heath Island to East Cape.

Heath Island, the western of the recently discovered islands on the east coast of New Guinea, is situated about 17 miles E.N.E. from the peak of the West Brumer Island, and is 4½ miles long north-east and south-west, by about a mile broad. Of its two peaks, the southern is a little the highest, rising to an altitude of about 1000 feet. They appear in the shape of a saddle from the east or westward, are well-defined and thickly wooded, forming a conspicuous mark for the whereabouts of China Strait and Possession Bay (Hayter Island). The island has patches of well-cultivated ground, and on its eastern side are two villages. A small woody island lies about a cable eastward of its eastern centre, and a reef, having on it three prominent rocks, surmounted with small trees, runs half-a-mile south-east from its south-east point. An off-lying reef of flat-topped rocks, about a cable in extent and 10 feet above water, is situated about 8 cables south-east from the same point, and between them and the shore reef is a depth of 17 fathoms. Midway between Heath and Blanchard Island (to the south-east), and about 1½ mile S. by E. of the south-east point of the former, are three small islets, lying in a north-west and south-east direction, the middle being the highest (about 250 feet); they are rocky and wooded, but were not closely examined or sounded around.

Blanchard Island.—S.E. by E., 3½ miles from the south-east point of Heath Island, is nearly two miles long E.S.E. and W.N.W., by about a mile in breadth. Its two most prominent peaks are situated near the north-east and south-west extremities. Of these, the north-east, which is the summit of the island, rises to an estimated height of 450 feet. An islet, about half-a-mile long, lies at a cable's distance from the south-east point of the island; it is well wooded, and a village was seen in a small sandy bay on its north-west side. No landing was effected here, nor were the depths in the vicinity ascertained.

Beehive Islet.—so named from its shape, is small, steep, rocky, and about 250 feet high. It is rather more than 2 miles S.E. of the south-east point of Blanchard Island, and affords a good mark, appearing steep-to, and free from surrounding dangers.

The Coast of New Guinea, from the point of the main land north-eastward of the Leocadie Isles to the point immediately north of Heath Island, trends in a north-easterly direction for about 12 miles, and consists of high ranges of hills, intersected by woody valleys, descending in some places to the water's edge. Two reefs, having but little water upon them, lie about a mile and a half from the coast, 2½ and 3 miles respectively from Leocadie Point; and a small islet, particulars of which have not been ascertained, is situated N.E. by E. ½ E. 5 miles from the same point, and about a mile from the coast. Between Heath Island and the point immediately north of it, is a channel leading into China Strait, in which soundings of 16 fathoms were obtained in the Basilisk during the survey of 1873, but further north it becomes narrowed by four scattered islets, and is not recommended.

China Strait, dividing the south-east part of New Guinea from Hayter Island, is about 4 miles long, N.E. by N. and S.W. by S., by rather more than three-quarters of a mile wide in its narrowest part. It was formerly thought that this strait might afford a shorter route to China, hence its name, but upon further examination it was found that the intricacy of the navigation to the north-eastward of it, caused by the many obstructing reefs there situated, was so great, as to render preferable the route some 25 miles farther east.

The depths in the strait vary from 24 fathoms, sandy bottom, eastward of and between Dinner Islet and Hayter Island, to 18 fathoms, mud, abreast Scramble Point. The only danger noted in a cursory examination, was a 4-fathom patch, about half a cable westward of Steep Point.

Anchorage may be found in Possession Bay in about 12 fathoms, mud, 3 cables from the shore and out of the influence of the tides, on the Hayter Island side of the strait.

Tides.—It is high water, full and change, in Possession Bay at 8 h. Springs rise about 5 feet, and neaps 2 feet 6 inches. The stream of flood sets to the northward, and that of ebb to the southward, following the direction of the strait, and reaching at springs, a velocity of 5 knots an hour,

In shore, on the eastern side of the strait, there is at times an eddy tide, setting in the opposite direction to that of the tide in the centre of the strait. It appeared from observations extending over a period of 14 days, that, although there was a constant change in the time of high-water, that the time of low-water was always at about 3 h. p.m. The direction, strength, and duration of the wind appeared to have a marked effect upon the tides.

Coast, Middle, and Dinner Islets, are small, similar in appearance, and situated at the south-west entrance to China Strait. Coast Islet is the highest, of the three (about 300 feet), and lies in the mouth of a small bight of the main land.

Dinner Islet is nearly mid-channel between Hayter and Heath Islands. Its summit is near its northern end, and it has a small sand beach on its north-east side.

Middle Islet is equidistant from Coast and Dinner Islets, resembling the latter in appearance, and bears from it N.N.W., distant 9 cables. All are thickly wooded and fringed with coral reef.

The Coast of New Guinea, from the point abreast Coast Island, trends north-east for 2½ miles, after which it gradually curves round to N. by W. to the North Foreland, and has but slight indentations; it is bold and thickly wooded, rising in steep inclines from the water's edge, to an altitude of about 1500 feet, with deep ravines, becoming more extensive and marked as the North Foreland is approached. Depths of 24 fathoms, coral, were found at a distance of about 1½ mile from the shore, but this can afford no criterion to the surrounding soundings, which are probably much deeper. A 4-fathom coral patch lies about a mile S.E. by E. of the North Foreland, and discolored water, having an apparent depth of about 4 fathoms upon it, lies about 1½ mile E. by N. ¾ N. of the same headland, the position of the latter danger being doubtful.

North Foreland is a steep, bluff, rounded headland, forming the north-east point of the southern prong of the fish-tail, to which the eastern part of New Guinea may be likened. To the westward of it, the coast forming the southern shore of Milne Bay continues its bold, steep nature, and is slightly indented by a succession of small bays, which have not been minutely examined. Small cascades of fresh water abound in this part, suitable for ships in quest of that necessary.

Spike Island lies about 1½ mile north-westward of the round of the North Foreland; it is low and woody, and about a mile in length, north-west and south-east. A coral reef surrounds it, and connects it with the shore reef of the mainland, over which there is a narrow boat channel.

Anchorage.—The Basilisk anchored in 14 fathoms, about 3 miles westward of Spike Island; and the Sandfly, in 1874, anchored in the same vicinity, and replenished with excellent water.

Milne Bay, which separates the north-east and south-east arms of the eastern part of New Guinea, runs in, in a westerly direction, and is about 25 miles deep, with an average breadth of 8 miles. The Owen Stanley Range, which may be called the back-bone of Eastern New Guinea, terminates at its head, and, running parallel to it, separated by extensive valleys, are the Cloudy Mountain and Stirling Ranges. Villages are numerous, and there is much cultivation on its southern shore. The water here is very deep—no bottom with 200 fathoms of line being found about half way into the bay, midway between or 4 miles distant from either shore.

Discovery Bay is situated about 16 miles westward of Spike Island. The following is extracted from Captain Morsey's report of 1873:—"This remarkably snug anchorage is situated on the south shore of Milne Bay, about 5 miles from its head. Approaching it from seaward the eastern part appears low and wooded; on nearer approach, the anchorage is distinctly marked by a reef above water, with one small bush on it. The entrance lies between this reef and the eastern point of the bay. Ships should keep the eastern bight of the cove on board, as the shore there is steep-to, there being 8 fathoms within a few yards of the beach, whilst the western side has an extensive shore reef, not always discernible.

"Water.—That which runs through the village is not recommended, but round either the east or west points of the bay abundance of fresh water may be obtained.

"Supplies of pigs, yams, and many varieties of tropical fruit and vegetables, were obtained from the natives, in exchange for old iron-hoop and axes; any other articles of trade were comparatively useless."

Aleford Islets, four in number, small, and surrounded by reefs, are situated at the head of Milne Bay, at a distance of about a mile from the shore. The depths outside them increase from 10 fathoms, half a mile off, to 20 and 30 fathoms at distances of 1½ and 2½ miles. Many large canoes were seen in this neighborhood, and the manner of the natives towards Europeans was anything but timorous.

Immediately to the north of the Aleford Islets the coast of Milne Bay appears to be low, with foul ground extending some distance from the shore; it then sweeps in a series of small steep bights along the foot of the Stirling Range, for about 20 miles, in an easterly direction, until abreast the Killerton Islands, where a more extensive bay occurs, in which anchorage may be found.

Killerton Islands are three in number, lying in an east and west direction, nearly equi-distant from each other, and varying in distance from the shore from a quarter of a mile to a mile. They are low and well wooded, and anchorage may be found between the eastern island and the shore of the bay in from 12 to 13 fathoms, sandy bottom. The space between the islands, as well as between the two western islands and the shore, is blocked with coral reef; and three dry patches extend to a distance of three-quarters of a mile southward of the middle island. The passage to the anchorage is from the eastward, keeping mid-channel between the eastern island and the shore; caution is necessary, as coral patches abound near all the islands. The anchoring ground is about a third of a mile southward of the village. When the Basilisk first visited this place the natives brought a dog on board, and sacrificed it by dashing its head on the quarter-deck, apparently as a peace offering to ratify friendship.

Mount Killerton, in the Stirling Range, rising immediately above the Killerton islands to an altitude of about 1,857 feet, is a conspicuous mountain, having rather a wide-spread summit, with rounded shoulders. From the south-east and north-west, the summit makes in three round knobs or elevations, of which the centre is the highest. In approaching Goschen Strait from the westward, this mountain affords a good mark, the top being seldom clouded.

From Killerton Islands the long narrow promontory, forming the northern horn of the eastern portion of New Guinea, trends N.E. by E. for about 10 miles to East Cape, forming four successive bays, the depth of water in which has not been ascertained. The hills forming the ridge of this promontory are of regular shape and well defined, gradually decreasing in altitude as East Cape is approached. The two peaks next, east of Mount Killerton, are tufted, a small group of large trees growing near the summit of each. Eastward of these, the hollows between the hills become deeper, giving to them when seen at a distance the appearance of islands.

East Cape of New Guinea, is the extremity of the promontory just described, the hills of which end in a double summit 588 feet high, thickly wooded on the north-west, but clear and well cultivated on the north-east side. A narrow strip of sand-beach here fringes the coast, and a village possessing a few canoes is situated close to the water's edge. From the eastern summit of East Cape, the summit of Lydia Island bears E. by S., distant 9½ miles, and Cape Prevost, of Normanby Island (D'Eutrecastaux group), N.N.E. ½ E., distant 9 miles.

The natives, though formerly friendly, during a second visit, appeared shy, and could with difficulty only be persuaded to accompany the surveying party to the peak, although all endeavour was made to propitiate them with hoop-iron and red handkerchief, and it was with evident relief that they saw the boats take their departure.

Anchor and Chain Islets, situated on a tongue of coral reef, north-east and south-west of each other, 1½ mile apart, and north-east of East Cape, are small, low, and thickly wooded. Anchor Islet is the larger of the two, and nearest to East Cape, from which it is separated by a narrow boat channel, through which the tide sets with considerable velocity. It is half a mile long, by about a cable broad, and near the southern centre, a grassy mound rises to a level with the tops of the trees, with which it is thickly clothed. The coral reef from which it springs, extends from its northern side to a distance of half a mile, and has several boulder rocks above water.

Chain Islet is nearly a third of a mile in length, east and west, by a cable in breadth, densely wooded, and surrounded by a narrow strip of sand-beach. Midway between these two islets a dip takes place in the coral reef, and a sand-bank near the centre of the channel between them, shows dry at all times of tide.

To the southward of Anchor and Chain Islets, and between them and Lydia Island, the depths are irregular, and numerous coral reefs, upon which the sea often breaks, block up what would otherwise be the shortest route through Goschen Strait.

The east coast of New Guinea has now been followed from what was formerly erroneously termed Heath Point (now Heath Island), and the point immediately north of the Leocadie Islands, where the description given in vol. 2, 2nd edition of the Australian Directory, page 880, ceases to be correct, to the newly discovered East Cape as found by Captain J. Moresby. The islands to the southward, discovered by the same officer, will be next described, together with the islands, rocks, and dangers, found existing in this locality, during the recent survey.

L. S. DAWSON,
Lieutenant and Admiralty Surveyor.
