The births and deaths in Melbourne and suburbs, together with the mean temperature in the shade, and the mean atmospheric pressure, during the month of June of each of the ten years 1878–1887 were as follow:—

The births of 1,377 children, viz., 686 boys and 691 girls, were registered in Melbourne and suburbs during the month of June: In the month of May 1,326 births were registered, or 51 less than in the month under review. The births were 454 above the average of the month during the previous ten years, but only 216 above that average if allowance be made for the increase of population.

The deaths registered in June numbered 630, viz., 345 of males and 285 of females; the births thus exceeded the deaths by 747, or 119 per cent. The deaths were fewer than those in May by 31, but exceeded the average of June during the previous ten years by 166. If, however, allowance be made for the increase of population, they will be found to have exceeded that average by 46 only.

To every 1,000 of the population of the district, the proportion of births registered was 3.52, and of deaths registered 1.61.

As many as 16 deaths of child-bearing women occurred during the month, which is the largest number ever registered in the district during a similar period. Nine of these were caused by puerperal fever, and the remainder by other circumstances attendant on child-birth. If the total number be compared with that of the births registered during the same period, it will be found that 1 death of a mother took place to every 86 children born alive.
