Occupational Health and Safety Act 1985
MINISTERIAL GUIDELINES ON PROSECUTIONS

Under section 48 (5) of the Occupational Health and Safety Act 1985 the Minister is required to issue to inspectors guidelines with respect to the prosecution of offences generally (but not give guidelines or directions in relation to any particular prosecution). These guidelines are issued and published in conformity with this requirement.

Guidelines For Occupational Health and Safety Inspectors within the Department of Employment and Industrial Affairs

Section 47 (1) of the Act states that "Any person who contravenes or fails to comply with any provision of this Act or regulations shall be guilty of an offence against this Act." Section 48 provides that proceedings for offences against the Act may be brought by the Minister or an inspector. Proceedings will be brought by officers within the Department of Employment and Industrial Affairs.

The Department retains the right to initiate proceedings for any offence against the Act and regulations and the decision to do so will be taken in the light of all relevant information regarding the circumstances of the case.

However, generally speaking the principal instruments to be used by the Department for securing compliance with the legal standards set out in the Act and regulations will be Improvement and Prohibition Notices. These Notices will be issued by Occupational Health and Safety inspectors pursuant to Part VI of the Act.

Improvement Notices will be used to require changes and modifications to workplace plant, equipment or processes to bring the workplace into compliance with the Act or regulations. In issuing these Notices, inspectors will rely on the general duties set out in Part III of the Act and on specific requirements set out in regulations.

Prohibition Notices will be used to stop the continuation of work which in the inspector's opinion is giving rise to an immediate threat to the health and safety of any person.

If alleged offences against the Act or regulations can be remedied through this system of Notices, further legal proceedings will not be instituted in the Courts. However, failure to comply with either an Improvement or Prohibition Notice will be viewed as a serious matter and will as a general rule result in proceedings being brought.

In addition proceedings will generally be instituted in the following circumstances:

- (1) Where an alleged breach of the Act or regulations has resulted in a fatality or serious accident;
- (2) Where an inspector alleges an employer has wilfully repeated the same offence;
- (3) When either an inspector or a health and safety representative alleges a Provisional Improvement Notice has not been complied with;
- (4) Where offences in relation to inspectors eg. assault or obstruction are alleged;
- (5) Where there is an allegation of discrimination against an employee for any action in relation to occupational health and safety;
- (6) Where the issue of notices is not considered appropriate for ensuring compliance with the Act or regulations.
