QUIT-RENTS.

IN conformity with the intimation given to the Legislative Council, that a portion of the Sum due for Quit-rents had been included in the Ways and Means of the year 1841, His Excellency the GOVERNOR directs it to be notified, that all persons indebted to the Government on account of Quit-rents will be required to pay the same—in whole or in part— during the present year, according to the following arrangement, viz:—

1. Collectors will be appointed in each district, and will be instructed to demand on the 1st April next, the amount payable for the year 1840, together with an equal amount (where due) for arrears of former years.

2. If these amounts be paid within three months from the day on which they are demanded, no further payment will be required until the year 1842, when a similar demand will be made of the Quit-rent for 1841, with an equal amount for the arrears due on 31st December, 1839.

In future years a demand will in like manner be made, of double the amount due for the year immediately preceding, until all arrears be liquidated, when the amount stated in the Deed of Grant will alone be demanded yearly.

3. If not paid within three months from the date of the first demand, the Collectors will be authorised to proceed by distress, or arrest; and in every such case the whole amount due will be levied at once.

4. For such Sums as the Collectors may obtain, they will be allowed five per cent. if the money be paid voluntarily, and ten per cent. if recovered by distress or arrest.

5. Such persons as, before the 1st of April next may pay into the Treasury at Sydney the amount proposed to be levied in the present year, will be allowed a Dividend of Five per cent., being the percentage that would otherwise be paid to the Collectors.

6. During the present year, (1841,) but not afterwards, all persons whatever will be permitted to redeem their Quit-rents, whether for Town Allotments or Portions of Land, and whether the Deed of Grant contain any covenant for redemption, or not, or payment of ten years' rent and all arrears due, into the Treasury.

In such cases, the Discount of Five per Cent will be allowed on the arrears, if paid before the 1st of April next, but not on the sum paid for the redemption of the Rents.

NOTICE TO MARINERS.

HIS Excellency the GOVERNOR, in directing the publication of a communication which has been received from the Hon. the Surveyor-General relative to the establishment of two beacons as guides to vessels approaching Gage's Roads through the Southern passage, near Rottnest, together with the necessary sailing instructions for vessels approaching this Island, avails himself of the opportunity thus afforded him of expressing his high sense of the important and valuable services rendered on this occasion by Captain Wickham, aided by the zealous co-operation of Lieut. Stokes, and the officers and crew of H. M. S. Beagle, whereby a lasting benefit has been conferred, not only on the inhabitants of Western Australia, but to all persons in any way connected with commerce and navigation in these seas.

Surrey Office,
Perth, 15th October, 1840.

SIR,—I have the honor to report, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, my return yesterday evening, in H. M. S. Beagle, from Rottnest Island, where, by the kindness of Capt. Wickham, and the zealous co-operation of Lieut. Stokes, and the officers and crew of that ship, two very serviceable beacons have been erected upon Duck Rock and Fisherman's Rock, for pointing out the best navigation into Gage's Roads through the Southern passage, near Rottnest. These sea-marks, and the admirable chart of the Island and passage, constructed by the indefatigable perseverance of Lieut. Stokes and his assistants, have enabled me to forward to His Excellency the enclosed sailing directions for the vicinity of Rottnest, which I beg leave to recommend should be made public as early and extensively as possible, no minute chart or instructions for that navigation having hitherto been published for the guidance of mariners.

Surveyor-General.

nial Secretary. }

SAILING DIRECTIONS FOR THE NAVIGATION ABOUT ROTTNEST ISLAND.

ROTTNEST ISLAND, 6 miles in length E. by N. and W. by S. with an extreme breadth of  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles, has an irregular hummocky surface, not much wooded, and may now be distinguished from Garden Island, and the contiguous main land by a white obelisk, 15 feet in height, with a pole in the middle, of the same length, which has recently been erected on its highest part near the centre of the Island. This Sea-mark, being elevated above 157 feet above the level of the sea, may be seen from a ship's deck in clear weather, at the distance of 7 or 8 leagues, and will shortly give place to a light-house of greater elevation. Its position according to observations in H. M. S. Beagle, is latitude  $32^{\circ}$  Om. 14s. south; longitude  $115^{\circ}$  Om. 6. east from Greenwich.

To round the Island on its north side, a ship should not approach nearer than one mile, in order to avoid the Horseshoe Rock, which lies  $\frac{3}{4}$  of a mile off shore, at the distance of two miles N.  $39^{\circ}$  E. from the Island's west extremity, and Roe's Reef, situated  $\frac{3}{4}$  of a mile N.  $16^{\circ}$  W. from a small rock with a cask beacon upon it, about half a cable's length from the Island's N. E. point. The beacon is upon Duck Rock, and the projection near it is Bathurst Point. A ship will be clear to the northward of Horseshoe Rock, while Duck Rock beacon is kept open of the north point of Rottnest; and Roe's Reef may be cleared on the north by keeping the west end of Rottnest (Cape Vlaming), open of the north point, until Duck Rock bears south; a course may then be shaped about E. by S. for a remarkable white sand patch on the main, which will be distinctly visible  $3\frac{1}{2}$  miles north from the entrance to Swan River; and when some rocky islets near the S. E. side of Rottnest are seen to the S. S. W., opening round the east end of another small rock with a cask beacon upon it  $1\frac{1}{4}$  mile S. E.  $\frac{3}{4}$  E. from Duck Rock, a S. E. by E. course will conduct into Gage's Roads.

Kingston Spit, in front of Thompson's Bay, extends two miles east from Duck Spit, and a long mile N. E. by E. from the beacon last mentioned, which has recently been placed upon Fisherman's Rock, a small mass of white rocks about two cables length N. E. from the sandy east point of Rottnest Island, distinguished by the name of Point Phillip. To clear Kingston Spit on the north, keep Duck Rock a little shut in to the south of a bare pointed hill near the northern shore of Rottnest; or should the bare hill not be distinguished, keep the north extreme of Rottnest to the southward of  $W. \frac{1}{2} S.$ ; and to clear Kingston Spit on the south, keep the south extreme of Rottnest (Point Parker), open to the next projection to the N. E. of it (S. W. by W.)

Thompson's Bay is a fit resort for boats only, being full of shoal rocky patches and sand banks, to the distance of a mile from the shore—the remainder of Kingston Spit being occupied by foul uneven ground, with depths varying between 5 and 2 fathoms; near its north and east edges are 7 fathoms, deepening to 9 and 10 in  $\frac{1}{2}$  miles. Between Point Phillip and the next projection, a long  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile to the SSW., (Bickley Point), there is a good shelter in Beagle's Anchorage from all the usual NW and SW gales of winter, the best berth being in four fathoms water, sandy ground, nearly  $\frac{1}{2}$  a mile south from Fisherman's Rock, and a  $\frac{1}{4}$  of a mile NE from two small rocks called the Twins; the south point of Rottnest being also in a line with Bickley Point. In this situation a vessel should moor, on account of the limited space.

On the south-east side of Rottnest there is a good channel,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles wide, called the Southern Passage into Gage's Road; the only obstruction in it being a patch of three fathoms, sand and weeds, called Middle Bank, in a line between Point Phillip and the Champion Rock, at  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles from the former, and  $1\frac{1}{4}$  miles from the latter. After a gale, the N. W. swell round the east end of Rottnest, crossing the ocean roll from the S. W., breaks heavily at this spot, and indicates its position; it may, however, be avoided by borrowing towards the rocky islets near Rottnest, which have no dangers fronting them beyond a cable's length; and the bank is cleared to the eastward when the beacon on Duck Rock opens round to the N. E. of that on Fisherman's Rock. These two beacons in a line lead about a cable's length to the N. E. of the Southern Passage.

Middle Bank.

Champion Rock.

Champion Rock, which has only 9 feet water upon it, with 4 and 5 fathoms all around. This danger which lies on the S. E. side of the Southern Passage, is at the N. W. extremity of a collection of rocks and foul ground that extend  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles N. N. W.  $\frac{1}{2}$  W. from the Stragglers toward the east end of Rottnest, without any channel amongst them which can yet be pronounced safe. In working up for the southern passage with a northerly wind, the Champion Rock and dangers in its vicinity may be avoided by keeping the high lump of rock called the Mewstone, open to the N. W. of the largest and highest of the Stragglers, until the S. W. end of Rottnest shuts in round its south point, bearing about  $W. \frac{1}{2} N.$  This last mark will carry a ship clear between Champion Rock and Middle Bank; but should the Mewstone and Stragglers not be satisfactorily distinguished, the beacon on Fisherman's Rock should not be brought to bear more to the westward than N.  $30^{\circ}$  W. by compass, until the S. W. point is shut in by the south point of Rottnest, as before shewn.

In steering for Rottnest Island and approaching the Southern Passage from the westward, the shore should not be approached nearer than half a mile, and the bays on each side of the south point are foul and rocky. Porpoise Bay, on its N. E. side, is also fronted by a low rocky mass called Direction Islet, which lies  $1\frac{1}{4}$  miles E.  $23^{\circ}$  N. from the south point, and has deep water to within a cable's length of its S. E. side. The summit of Direction Islet in a line with a hill with some trees on its summit (Tree Hill,) about half a mile to the north of the south point, leads directly over Middle Bank; therefore Tree Hill a little open to the north of Direction Islet leads clear to the north of Middle Bank; and the same hill on with south point of Direction Islet leads clear on its south side. The next grey rock (Wallace Islet), half a mile to the N.N.E., is very rugged, and lies close in to Bickley Point; it has  $2\frac{1}{2}$  fathoms, rocky ground, nearly quarter of a mile S.E. of it, which may be avoided in hauling up for Beagle's Anchorage, by keeping the south point on with the southern extreme of Direction Islet, until Fisher's Rock bears north. The Twin Rocks lie near each other, quarter of a mile north-east from Wallace Islet, and are bold and steep. Round their north-east side is Beagle's Anchorage, which is a secure retreat in winter.

Currents. In beating up to Rotnest against a strong northerly or southerly breeze, much ground will be gained by working in the stream of the Island, in order to avoid the strength of a lee current, which is found on such occasions to run at the rate of 1 to  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles an hour. The Beagle found it high water at full and change in Thompson's Bay, at 7h. 50m. P.M.; tide ebbing ten hours, and flowing fourteen hours, with a rise not exceeding thirty-two inches.

Tides. Sea and land breeze prevail in summer. From March to October, N.W. gales may be expected, rising from the northward, preceded by a fall in the barometer; blowing longest at N.W.; strongest between W. N.W. and W.; and moderating after a hard squall from the S.W.
