THE VICE-ADMIRALTY COURTS ACT, 1863.

THE "Vice-Admiralty Courts Act, 1863," and an explanation of the provisions thereof, hereto subjoined, are published for general information.

By His Excellency's Command,

GEO. HIGINBOTHAM,
Attorney General.

Crown Law Offices,
Melbourne, 1st October, 1863.

VICE-ADMIRALTY COURTS ACT, 1863.

EXPLANATION OF THE PROVISIONS OF THE ACT.

Section 2. The definitions in this section are merely to avoid repetition.

Section 3. Hitherto, on a vacancy occurring in the office of vice-admiral, the governor of the colony has been appointed as a matter of course. This section is intended to obviate the necessity of a new appointment of a vice-admiral being issued on every change of governor.

Section 4. The object of this section is to obviate the delay which has occurred in filling up any vacancy in the office of judge, owing to the necessity which existed of the appointment being made by the Admiralty in England. In distant colonies, even if no time were lost in notifying the vacancy to the Admiralty, many months unavoidably intervened before a new judge could be appointed. In the meantime, either the proceedings of the court were suspended, or if carried on were of doubtful validity, and thus, where foreign vessels have been adjudicated upon, serious difficulties might arise.

Again, since the business of the vice-admiralty courts is ordinarily not sufficient, in time of peace, to remunerate a judge who does not hold some other more lucrative appointment, it has been the constant practice for the governor of the colony, on a vacancy in the office of judge of the vice-admiralty court, to recommend the chief justice or other principal judicial officer of the colony for the vacant office, and the Lords of the Admiralty have for years invariably appointed the person so recommended. The effect of this section is simply to enable the chief justice or other principal judicial officer of the colony to act as vice-admiralty judge immediately on that office becoming vacant, instead of waiting for a formal appointment from the Admiralty in England.

It will be observed that the power of the Lords of the Admiralty, if it should at any time be advisable, to appoint some other person than the chief justice of the colony to be vice-admiralty judge, is expressly saved by section 7 of the Act.

Section 5. This section has a similar object; to obviate delay in filling up vacancies in the offices of registrar and marshal of the vice-admiralty courts. It does not, however, attach these offices, like that of the judge, to any other colonial appointment. It seems better that they should be filled up by the judge, with the approval of the governor. But the power of the Admiralty to make the appointments, if at any time it should be deemed expedient to do so, is saved by section 7.

Section 6. The object of this section is, that the names of the persons holding offices in the vice-admiralty courts may be known in this country, especially as bills of exchange are from time to time drawn upon the accountant-general of the navy, and accepted by him on the certificates of the judges and registrars of the vice-admiralty courts.

Section 7. This section saves the existing powers of the Admiralty to make appointments in the vice-admiralty courts, whenever it may be found expedient to do so.

Section 8. In many colonies, on vacancies occurring in the office of judge, registrar, or marshal, the colonial authorities have neglected or delayed to obtain formal appointments from the Admiralty, and the duties have therefore been performed by persons not legally appointed. This section ratifies, so far as can be done, the past official acts of such persons.

Section 9. This section indemnifies such persons for having acted without due authority.

Section 10. The original jurisdiction of the vice-admiralty courts, as defined by the 2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 51, s. 6, was nearly co-extensive with the jurisdiction then possessed by the High Court of Admiralty of England. Since then the jurisdiction of the latter court has been much extended by the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, and by the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 10, and the object of this section is to define anew the jurisdiction of the vice-admiralty courts, and to assimilate it, with certain exceptions, to that now exercised by the High Court of Admiralty of England.

(1.) Claims for seamen's wages:

• This was a part of the original jurisdiction of the vice-admiralty courts.

(2.) Claims for masters' wages and disbursements on account of the ship :

It was always thought to be a very hard thing, that though the seamen could recover the amount due to them for wages in the High Court of Admiralty of England, the master could not. Accordingly jurisdiction was given to that court to entertain suits for masters' wages, under certain circumstances. Gradually the right of the master to sue has been extended, and now by the 24 Vict. c. 10, s. 10, the master is allowed to recover, not only any wages, but also any disbursements on account of the vessel that may be due to him. The object of this clause of the section is to give a master the same remedy in a vice-admiralty court as he now has in the High Court of Admiralty of England.

(3.) Claims in respect of pilotage :

This was part of the original jurisdiction of the courts.

(4.) Claims in respect of salvage of any ship, or of life or goods therefrom :

Salvage of ship and of goods was part of the original jurisdiction ; but the courts had no power to award salvage for saving human life at sea. Jurisdiction in claims for life salvage was given to the High Court of Admiralty of England by the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, ss. 458, &c , and the jurisdiction was extended by the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 10, s. 9. The object of this clause is to give similar jurisdiction to the vice-admiralty courts.

(5.) Claims in respect of towage :

Jurisdiction in claims for towage was given to the High Court of Admiralty of England by the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6. The object of this clause is to extend the jurisdiction to the vice-admiralty courts, which, as such services are of a local character, is obviously desirable.

(6.) Claims for damage done by any ship :

The original jurisdiction of the courts included "Suits for damage to a ship by collision;" thus, it would seem, including cases where a ship is damaged by collision with a pier or wharf, but not where a pier or wharf is damaged by a ship. But the power of proceeding in rem possessed by the admiralty courts is required rather in the latter case than in the former ; there is no need to arrest a pier or wharf, which are stationary ; but the ship may escape. What is wanted is jurisdiction in all cases where damage is done by a ship.

Jurisdiction in all such cases was conferred upon the High Court of Admiralty of England by the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 10, s. 7, and this clause gives the same jurisdiction to the vice-admiralty courts.

(7.) Claims in respect of bottomry or respondentia bonds :

This was part of the original jurisdiction of the courts.

(8.) Claims in respect of any mortgage where the ship has been sold by a decree of the vice-admiralty court, and the proceeds are under its control :

Jurisdiction in such cases was conferred upon the High Court of Admiralty of England by the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, sect. 3, and this clause gives similar jurisdiction to the vice-admiralty courts.

It is obviously desirable that mortgagees should be enabled to prosecute their claims before the proceeds are disposed of, and multiplicity of suits is avoided by giving the adjudication thereon to the court which has the control of the proceeds.

(9.) Claims between the owners of any ship registered in the possession in which the court is established, touching the ownership, possession, employment, or earnings of such ship :

Jurisdiction in all questions of ownership, &c., arising between co-owners was conferred upon the High Court of Admiralty of England by the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 10, s. 8. The object of this clause is to give a similar jurisdiction to the vice-admiralty courts, but, for obvious reasons, only in the case of ships registered in the colony or possession in which the court is established.

(10.) Claims for necessities supplied, in the possession in which the court is established, to any ship of which no owner or part owner is domiciled within the possession at the time of the necessities being supplied :

Jurisdiction over claims for necessities supplied to foreign ships was given to the High Court of Admiralty of England by the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, and was extended to all cases where no owner or part owner is domiciled in England or Wales by the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 10, s. 5. Before these provisions were enacted, British subjects who had supplied necessities to foreign ships had no means of enforcing their claims, except by suing the foreign shipowner in the courts of his own country for goods supplied perhaps in this.

This caused much inconvenience to the ship-owner also, for merchants were naturally unwilling to supply the ship with necessities, knowing that they could not recover the value by proceeding against the ship. The same reasons apply to cases where necessities are supplied in any colony to a ship whose owners are not there domiciled ; and the object of this clause is to enable colonial merchants, who have so supplied necessities in any colony, to proceed against the ship in the vice-admiralty court of that colony, as may now be done by English merchants in the High Court of Admiralty of England.

(11.) Claims in respect of the building, equipping, or repairing within any British possession of any ship of which no owner or part owner is domiciled within the possession at the time of the work being done :

Similar reasons apply for extending the jurisdiction of the vice-admiralty courts to the claims for building, &c., mentioned in this clause.

Section 11. (1.) All cases of breach of the regulations and instructions relating to Her Majesty's navy at sea:

This was part of the original jurisdiction of the courts.

(2.) All matters arising out of droits of admiralty:

This also was part of the original jurisdiction.

Section 12. The object of this section is—

- (1.) To save the existing jurisdiction of the vice-admiralty courts in other cases than those above mentioned; e. g., in matters relative to the slave trade; and
- (2.) To save the jurisdiction of all other courts from any possible infringement.

Section 13. This section merely expresses in other words a provision which is contained in one of the existing Acts.

Sections 14 to 19. These sections merely re-enact, with a few verbal alterations, the existing provisions contained in sections 1 to 5 of 2 & 3 Will. IV., c. 51.

Section 20. The registrar of the High Court of Admiralty was empowered to administer oaths by the 24 Vict. c. 10, s. 26, and the object of this section is to confer a similar power upon the registrars of the vice-admiralty courts.

The section is adopted mutatis mutandis from that in the 24 Vict. c. 10.

Section 21. The object of this section is to place the parties in certain cross causes on an equality. It is adopted with merely verbal alterations from section 34 of the 24 Vict. c. 10. It is simply a matter of practice.

Section 22. This section provides that there shall not be any appeal from any decree of a vice-admiralty court which is not in the nature of a final sentence, except by permission of the judge.

Section 23. The object of this section is to obviate the delay which has occurred from the great length of time allowed for appealing. By the 5 Geo. IV., c. 113, s. 29, the Slave Trade Consolidation Act, the time allowed for appealing from any vice-admiralty court to the west of the Cape of Good Hope was twelve months, and from the court at the Cape, and any vice-admiralty court to the eastward of the Cape, eighteen months. By the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 38, s. 11, which was an Act for regulating Appeals to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, the time allowed for appealing was twelve months from the vice-admiralty court at the Cape of Good Hope, and from all vice-admiralty courts to the westward thereof, and eighteen months from vice-admiralty courts to the eastward thereof. With the present facilities of communication six months will probably be ample time for appealing from any vice-admiralty court wherever established. It is clearly desirable to shorten the time, as far as can be done without injustice to appellants, especially as no distribution can be made of bounties in slave and piratical cases, or of other naval prize money arising out of prizes condemned in the vice-admiralty courts, until the extreme time for appealing has expired. Power is, however, reserved to Her Majesty of extending the time allowed for appealing in cases in which it may appear right to do so.

Section 24. This section repeals three Acts which are superseded by this Act, and saves the existing rules of practice and tables of fees established under the 2 & 3 Will. IV., c. 51, until new rules shall be issued.

SCHEDULE A.

Schedule A. contains a list of the courts to which the Act applies. It includes all the existing vice-admiralty courts, except those within Her Majesty's possessions in India; viz., Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Aden. These courts have been expressly excepted at the request of the Secretary of State for India, who was of opinion that the provisions of the Act should not be extended to them, no representation having reached him that any such extension was necessary.

SCHEDULE B.

Specifies the Acts and parts of Acts repealed. They are—

- (1.) 56 Geo. III. c. 82, which confirmed the judicial acts of surrogates of vice-admiralty courts during vacancies in the office of judge, and which is superseded by the general provisions contained in sections 8 and 9 of this Act.
- (2.) 5 Geo. IV. c. 113, s. 29, which fixed the time to be allowed for appealing in slave trade cases, and is superseded by section 23 of this Act.
- (3.) 2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 51, which is embodied in this Act, with a few verbal alterations.
- (4.) 6 & 7 Vict. c. 38, s. 11, which fixed the time for appealing from the ecclesiastical and vice-admiralty courts, and which is superseded as to the latter by section 23 of this Act.
- (5.) 17 & 18 Vict. c. 37, which confirmed the judicial acts of a judge of the vice-admiralty court at Mauritius who had been informally appointed, and which, like the 56 Geo. III. c. 82, is superseded by sections 8 and 9 of this Act.

21. If a cause of damage by collision be instituted in any vice-admiralty court, and the defendant institute a cross cause in respect of the same collision, the judge may, on application of either party, direct both causes to be heard at the same time and on the same evidence; and if the ship of the defendant in one of the causes has been arrested, or security given by him to answer judgment, but the ship of the defendant in the other cause cannot be arrested, and security has not been given to answer judgment therein, the court may, if it think fit, suspend the proceedings in the former cause until security has been given to answer judgment in the latter cause.

As to the hearing of cross causes.

The mortality of Melbourne and suburbs, together with the mean temperature in the shade, and the atmospheric pressure during the month of August for the last four years, were as follow:—

	Number of Deaths.	Mean Temperature.	Mean Height of Barometer.
August, 1860	271	49.4°	30.173 inches.
" 1861	265	49.2°	30.036 "
" 1862	190	50.0°	30.014 "
" 1863	223	48.4°	29.924 "
Mean of four years	237	49.2°	30.035 "

The number of deaths and the mean heights of thermometer and barometer in August, 1863, were thus all below the average. The deaths numbered one less than those recorded in the month of July.

The deaths of males and females occurring during the month amounted respectively to 58 and 42 per cent. of the total number recorded. Those of children under five years of age amounted only to 38 per cent. of the total. According to experience, it is only in the cool months of the year that the proportion of deaths of children under five is ever less than 50 per cent. of the whole mortality. In July it was 45 per cent. and in August, 1862, it was 43 per cent. of the total, but it has not before been known to fall so low as 38 per cent., as was the case this month.

The highest mortality occurring on any one day was on the 19th, when 16 deaths took place. Twelve deaths also took place on the 6th, and 11 on the 28th and 31st. As few as 3 deaths were recorded on the 10th, 14th, and 26th.

Three males died during the month at more advanced ages than 75 years, viz.:—One at 76 of suffocation, one at 78 and another at 96 of old age.

Thirteen deaths were occasioned by violence, and were returned as follow:—A watchman aged 55 years died from accidental burning, a boy aged 5 years and another of a year old from accidental scalds. A publisher aged 76 was suffocated in a manner not stated. Three children, aged respectively 5 days, 8 weeks, and 21 weeks, were suffocated by overlying. A clerk aged 36 was drowned in the Yarra, also a baker aged 31. A male aged 35 was drowned in Hobson's Bay. A child 4½ years old was killed at Brunswick by a kick from a horse. A laborer aged 35 died from injuries in the arm inflicted with a knife by a Chinese. A blacksmith aged 61 committed suicide in a manner not stated.

The deaths which took place in public institutions numbered 58, or 26 per cent. of the whole, and occurred as follow:—Melbourne Hospital, 46; Benevolent Asylum, 2; Immigrants' Home, 3; Immigration Depot, 1; Lying-in Hospital, 2; Melbourne Gaol, 1; Yarra Bend Lunatic Asylum, 3.

The following table shows the number of persons of all ages according to the last census, the number of deaths of persons under and over five years of age, the total at all ages, and the number of deaths to every 1000 of the population during the month of August, 1863, in the Statistical District of Melbourne and suburbs, and in each of the sub-districts of which it is composed:—

Of the 85 deaths of children under five years of age, 45, or 53 per cent., were of males, and 40, or about 47 per cent., were of females; 41 were under one year, 19 were between one and two years, 12 were between two and three years, 7 were between three and four years, and 6 were between four and five years.
