No. 125.]

MONDAY, DECEMBER 14.

[1863.

RENTS OF RUNS, 1863.

It is hereby notified to the occupiers of runs that the half-yearly rents due in respect of the same on the 31st December instant, as set forth in the following schedule, will be receivable at the Treasury, Melbourne, or at any of the several offices of the Receivers and Paymasters in the country districts, on or before the 31st instant; and it is further notified that if default be made in due payment of the same, penalties provided under section 116 of Land Act 1862 will be enforced.

R. HEALES,

President of the Board of Land and Works.

Office of Lands and Survey,
Melbourne, 9th December, 1863.

The sums marked with (*) are reduced under the 109th clause.

The sums marked (†) are charged pending the adjustment of rent by reference obtained through the Supreme Court. Of those sums the amount of assessment of 1861 will be passed to the general revenue, and the balance into the trust fund.

THE MIDDLE CLASS
IN
NINETEENTH CENTURY

The middle class in the nineteenth century was a complex and evolving social group. It emerged from the ranks of the bourgeoisie and the lower gentry, and its members were characterized by a mix of wealth, education, and social status. The middle class was not a monolithic entity, but rather a collection of various sub-groups, each with its own distinct characteristics and interests. The middle class was often seen as the backbone of the nation, responsible for the economic and social progress of the country. Its members were typically engaged in professions, commerce, or industry, and they played a significant role in the development of the modern world. The middle class was also known for its emphasis on education, moral values, and social reform. It was a class that sought to improve the lives of all people and to create a more just and equitable society. The middle class was a force to be reckoned with in the nineteenth century, and its influence can still be seen in the world today.
