War Office, 8th December, 1864.

SIR,—I am directed by the Secretary of State for War to transmit a copy of An Act to amend the Penal Servitude Act (27 & 28 Vict. c. 47), passed on the 25th July last, together with a copy of the Circular issued by the Home Office to the Judges, calling their attention to its provisions, and explaining the mode in which convicts sentenced to penal servitude will henceforth be treated, for your information and guidance, in reference to the power vested in you of approving and revising sentences of Courts Martial.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

HARTINGTON.

To General and other Officers Commanding Troops and Stations.

CIRCULAR.

Whitehall, August 15, 1864.

SIR,—I think it right to lose no time in transmitting to you a Statute which received the Royal Assent at the close of the last session of Parliament, entitled An Act to amend the Penal Servitude Acts.

In doing so I feel it my duty to furnish you with correct information as to the mode in which convicts under sentence of penal servitude will now be treated.

The principal change in the law which is effected by this Statute is the abolition of sentences of penal servitude of four and three years, leaving the sentence of five years as the shortest that can be passed in any case, and authorizing it in those cases where only sentences of four or three years could have been passed before. This will have the effect of increasing the severity of the penal law, which, owing to the very frequent use of the short sentences referred to, had, in the opinion of the Royal Commissioners who lately investigated this subject, become too much relaxed. With the same object another very important provision is added, that a person convicted of a crime punishable with penal servitude, after having been previously convicted of felony, if the Judge in his discretion thinks that the punishment of penal servitude should be inflicted, shall not be so sentenced for a shorter period than seven years.

It will be observed that in all these cases the alternative sentence of imprisonment is not interfered with. In that respect the law continues as it stood before the passing of the late Statute.

The remainder, and by far the larger portion of the Act, refers to the granting to convicts under this sentence, licences to be at large before its expiration; and introduces various regulations for the purpose of preventing the misconduct of such persons between the time of their release and that at which they would have been by law entitled to their liberty. I do not think it necessary to occupy your time with any observations upon this part of the subject, except to remark that, amongst other safeguards of the public, it is enacted that the conviction of a licence-holder upon indictment of any offence, involves not merely a revocation of his licence, but a remission to his original sentence as it stood when his licence was granted, and this in addition to any punishment to which he may be sentenced upon such indictment.

It appears to me that the information which you really require is rather as to the extent of the remission hereafter to be granted in such cases, and the terms upon which it is to be obtained. When you are fully informed upon these two points you will see exactly the practical effect of the sentences which you pronounce, and will feel confident that nothing is left to accident or caprice, but that the punishment inflicted is precisely that which you intended to inflict.

In accordance with the strong recommendation of the Royal Commissioners, an important modification is about to be introduced into the convict system in reference to the granting of remissions.

Instead of these being granted as a reward of general good conduct as heretofore, they are now to be earned by industry alone; general good conduct (such as implicit obedience to all prison rules) will be as indispensable as before, but will of itself count as nothing towards the obtaining a remission of a portion of the sentence; that can only be gained by steady and laborious industry, the degree of which will be measured and recorded every day by the assignment to each convict of a certain number of marks.

A maximum amount of remission is fixed (as hereafter stated) as the utmost which can be obtained by perfect industry, and the number of marks is so regulated that a convict must obtain the maximum number of marks every day (without any deduction for misconduct) in order to get the maximum remission. The sentence, therefore, is absolutely certain up to a certain point, but may possibly extend beyond that point, and will inevitably do so unless the convict persistently and strenuously exerts himself.

The maximum periods of remission for male convicts are to be as follows:—
SCALE for regulating the Discharge on Orders of Licence of Male Convicts sentenced to Penal Servitude.

Term of Sentence.	Period to be undergone in Separate Confinement.	Shortest Period to be undergone on Public Works.			Maximum Period to be Remitted.
		Yrs.	Mos.	Wks.	Yrs.	Mos.	Wks.
5	} Nine months, in all cases	3	2	1	1	0	3
6		3	11	1	1	3	3
7		4	8	1	1	6	3
8		5	5	1	1	9	3
9		6	2	1	2	0	3
10		6	11	1	2	3	3
12		8	5	1	2	9	3
14		9	11	1	3	3	3
15		10	8	1	3	6	3
20		14	5	1	4	9	3

The principle adopted by this Scale is a maximum remission of a fourth part of that portion of the sentence which remains after deducting nine months for separate confinement.

With respect to convicts hereafter sentenced to penal servitude for life, they will be considered as forming an exception to the rule, that a remission of sentence may be earned by a regular course of industry. Upon this point the Royal Commissioners have reported as follows:—

“Sentences for life should, we think, be only passed on men guilty of very aggravated crimes, but when passed they ought really to imply that those who have incurred them shall never again be allowed to return to society either at home or in a colony, unless the mercy of the Crown should be extended to them on special grounds. After a certain time, if they behave well, the severity of their punishment might be properly relaxed, but they never ought to regain even the qualified freedom of the holder of a ticket-of-leave.

“If, however, they are to be kept in perpetual confinement, this punishment may be inflicted more safely and more conveniently at home than in a colony. Should this rule as to the enforcement of sentences for life be adopted, the courts before which offenders are tried would naturally make a distinction between the most atrocious criminals and those whose guilt, though aggravated, is one degree less, by passing sentences for life on the former only, and on the latter, sentences for a definite though in some cases a very long term of years.”

I propose, in accordance with these views, to reserve all cases of this nature which may arise hereafter for special consideration, with a view to a more rigid enforcement of this sentence.

With respect to females, I also concur with the Royal Commissioners, who, for the reasons stated in page 70 of their Report, recommend the remission of a larger portion of sentences of penal servitude in the case of female convicts.

The Table applicable to them will be as follows, being founded upon the principle of a maximum remission of a third part of each sentence:—

TABLE for regulating the Discharge on Orders of Licence of Female Convicts sentenced to Penal Servitude.

Term of Sentence.	Maximum Period to be Remitted.	Term of Sentence.	Maximum Period to be Remitted.
Years.	Yrs. Mos.	Years.	Yrs. Mos.
5	1 8	10	3 4
6	2 0	12	4 0
7	2 4	14	4 8
8	2 8	15	5 0
9	3 0	20	6 8

There are two more points connected with convicts sentenced to penal servitude upon which I think it right to add a few words.

The first and most important of these questions is that of their diet.

A notion had prevailed in some quarters that this was excessive in quantity and unnecessarily good in quality, and the subject was brought under the notice of the Royal Commissioners, who, upon the evidence before them, did not feel justified in recommending any change, though they advised that experiments should be tried in order to ascertain whether any reduction could safely be made. In consequence of this suggestion, the matter has since been more fully investigated by a Committee of experienced medical men, appointed for that purpose only, and the result has been a moderate reduction in the quantity of food allowed, both in the stage of separate confinement and in that of hard labour upon public works. This alteration has only just been introduced in practice, but there is no reason at present to doubt that it will be attended with success.

The other and the only remaining question upon which I propose to make any observations is that of the amount of gratuities allowed to this class of convicts upon their discharge. An important change has been made in this respect upon the recommendation of the Royal Commissioners. The maximum amount which can be earned by the greatest possible industry has been largely reduced, and is to be the same whatever may be the length of the sentence. By this means a defect properly pointed out in the former system will be obviated, viz., that prisoners who were under the heaviest sentences, in consequence of the enormity of their offences, received the largest sums of money from the public upon the recovery of their freedom. They will henceforth have no more than is considered necessary to enable them to live honestly until they can be reasonably expected to procure employment.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

G. GREY.

LIST OF GRANTS AND LEASES DETAINED AT THE CROWN LANDS OFFICE, MELBOURNE, FOR THE NAMES OR RESIDENCES OF THE RESPECTIVE GRANTEES AND LESSEES.

INFORMATION on these points, with satisfactory proof, is required for the purpose of completing the deeds. As considerable difficulty has been experienced in deciphering the signatures of many purchasers of land, it is particularly requested that applications for the detained Deeds should contain the names in full of the persons entitled legibly written. Land Officers and other Government Officers who may be in possession of the particulars, are requested to transmit them to this office as early as possible, in order that the Deeds may be completed and issued.

Lands and Survey Office,
Melbourne, 7th March, 1865.
