BASS STRAIT.

THE following remarks on the navigation of a portion of the north coast of Bass Strait are by Navigating Lieutenant Henry J. Stanley, in charge of the Coast Survey of Victoria, Australia:—*

(All bearings are magnetic. Variation  $9^{\circ} 20'$  easterly in 1869.)

CAPE WOLLAMAI TO WILSON PROMONTORY.

The Coast from Griffith Point (which is N. by E.  $\frac{1}{2}$  E., 2 miles from Cape Wollamai) forms a slight curve trending E.  $\frac{1}{2}$  S.  $\frac{1}{2}$  miles to Black Head, and from thence south-easterly 3 miles to the River Powlett, continuing on in the same direction for a further distance of 5 miles to Coal Point, occupied by the Victoria Coal Company.

The mines are not being worked.

Coal Point has numerous sunken rocks off it at a distance of a whole mile southward to the point; one rock uncovers at low water spring tides. The heavy break shows the point to be dangerous of approach.

From Coal Point the land takes a S.E. by E.  $\frac{1}{2}$  E. direction to Cape Patterson, from which it is distant 24 miles. The whole coast south-east of the Black Head is little more than a succession of sandy hillocks, from 100 to 144 feet high, covered in most places with dwarfed teatree, but occasionally bare.

Cape Patterson is an ill-defined point, rounded and low; the highest part within a mile of the point is 127 feet above the sea, and this elevation scarcely increases until it joins a range of hills over 900 feet high to the east and north-east of River Hill, at a distance of 11 miles from the Cape. A reef, dry at low water, extends 3 cables in a south-east direction from the point, and 3 fathoms will be found at about 4 cables S. by E.

There is nothing to point out Cape Patterson. It is the least conspicuous point along the whole coast; but a conspicuous rock, 59 feet high, about 3 miles to the eastward of the Cape, known as the Eagle's Nest, lying half a cable off the coast at its turn towards Anderson Inlet, serves to distinguish it. About this place east and west the coast has a cliffy appearance.

From Cape Patterson the coast trends 2 miles in an E. by N. direction, and thence N.E. 4 miles to the mouth of Anderson Inlet.

Anderson Inlet, which by its two streams, Tarwin River and Screw Creek, drains about 300 square miles of country, is not navigable except for flat-bottomed boats or barges, but there is depth of water in patches sufficient to allow the vessels which enter to anchor.

The bight formed about the mouth of Anderson Inlet is known as Venus Bay, but it does not afford good anchorage.

Petrit Rock, only 2 feet above high water, lies nearly half a mile from the shore, about midway between Eagle's Nest and the mouth of Anderson Inlet.

Tides.—It is high water, full and change, in Venus Bay at 11h. 56m. Range of tide about 7 feet.

The Coast.—From Point Smythe, the east entrance point of Anderson Inlet, the coast trends south-east 13½ miles with a slight curve to Watercress Creek; all this coast is a succession of sand hills 110 to 160 feet in height, their faces for the last 5 miles being comparatively destitute of verdure.

Watercress Creek (so named from being full of that plant) is at the foot of the table-land at Cape Liptrap. On the coast, three-quarters of a mile north-west of the mouth of Watercress creek, is a small rock of sandstone 15 feet above high water, and from this to a distance of 4 cables seaward, are several sunken rocks. The coast line here is composed of low sandstone cliffs.

S. by E.  $\frac{1}{2}$  E. for one mile from Watercress Creek is a very rugged piece of coast, and point of overhanging sandstone, with jagged and pointed rocks strewn along the shore.

Off the northern portion of this rugged coast, and at a distance of 2 cables, lies the Arch Rock, 82 feet high, having a natural arch on its eastern side. It has a rock awash at half-tide lying one cable to the W.S.W. The same character of coast continues for a mile beyond the Arch Rock in a S. E. by S. direction, having innumerable pinnacle rocks of various heights strewn along the whole distance, with other outlying sunken and half-tide rocks, in some places nearly half a mile from the shore. Off this piece of coast crawfish abound.

Hence the land trends in a S.S.E. direction 3 miles to a conspicuous islet, 63 feet high, off the western part of Cape Liptrap; half this distance being a straight piece of sandy coast, with the table-land of Cape Liptrap getting nearer as the coast runs southward. The whole has outlying sunken rocks about 3 cables from the shore. From the islet the coast forms three small bays to the Cape.

Cape Liptrap, which is nearly perpendicular, and 297 feet high, forms the south-west extremity of a table-topped promontory 550 feet high, joining the base of the Hoddle range of hills, which are 965 feet above the sea; at 16 miles N.E. by N. from the Cape, these again join the Fatigue mountain range, the highest part of which is above 2000 feet high.

Several outlying rocks, varying in height from 5 to 30 feet, partially fringe the coast southward and eastward of Cape Liptrap, but none extend more than 1½ cables from the shore.

Grinder Point.—From Cape Liptrap the land forms a bight to Grinder Point, which is 2 miles N.E. by E.  $\frac{1}{2}$  E. from the Cape. This bight is fringed with low water and sunken rocks, which in some places extend 3 cables from the shore, and farther out even than this in bad weather the sea breaks violently.

From Grinder Point the land takes a north-easterly direction for a further distance of 24 miles to Bell Point, and a similar description of coast to the last is found, with the exception that the land is somewhat lower, and a number of rocks from 10 to 30 feet high are found at short distances from the shore.

Bell Point may be known by a large broad-topped rock about 40 feet high, at about a cable from the shore. From this point the land takes an abrupt turn into Waratah Bay, running about N.N.W. for 2 miles. At 3 cables from Bell Point is a small islet 60 feet high, and at about the distance of one mile are the Bird Rocks, three in number, and from 40 to 60 feet high, the outer rock being 2 cables from the shore. These rocks will be a guide to mariners using the bay, enabling them to ascertain their position.

Waratah Bay affords good anchorage. Vessels may anchor in good holding ground at more than a mile from the shore during south-westerly gales, and in the event of the wind chopping round to the eastward they will have plenty of room for working out.

In the depth of the bay, at 4 miles from Bell Point, the coast line falls to a height of only 100 feet, when the ordinary feature of sand hills, generally covered with teatree, is again met with.

Tides.—It is high water in Waratah Bay, full and change, at 12h. Range of tide 8 feet.

Shallow Inlet.—From Waratah Bay the coast trends to the E.S.E. till within 2 miles of the entrance to Shallow Inlet, when its features are altered to a low, bare, sandy shore, scarcely above high water. The east entrance point of this shallow inlet or lagoon is much higher, but is likewise of bare sand. It was not found possible to sound the entrance of the inlet on account of the heavy break; but the depth varies with the prevailing winds and freshes, being occasionally dry at low water, and at other times having sufficient water for a large boat to enter.

From the mouth of this inlet the land trends with a slight curve in a S.E.  $\frac{1}{2}$  S. direction for nearly 6 miles to the Black Rock, which is about 30 feet high, and one cable from the coast.

From a position 4 miles north-west of Shallow Inlet to about a mile from the Black Rock, shoal water with a sandy bottom will be found extending about half a mile from the shore, and off the inlet this shoal water runs out nearly a mile. At about 1½ miles to the northward, and for 2½ miles to the southward of Black Rock, the sandy bottom is interspersed with rocks, some of which uncover at low water.

Shellback Island.—About 1½ miles south-west of Black Rock lies Shellback Island, 357 feet high; it is the northernmost of the Islands on the west coast of Wilson Promontory.

Tongue Point is 167 feet high, and lies S.  $\frac{1}{2}$  E. 2½ miles from Black Rock, the coast between forming a deep bight, in the depth of which are a few low red cliffs, but they are not conspicuous. Tongue Point has a remarkable conical white rock, 30 feet high, close off it to seaward. Abreast of it, at a distance of a mile, the shore is high, and rises at a distance of 4 miles to parts of the Promontory range, which are here about 2000 feet above the level of the sea. Mount Vereker, the north-west mountain of the Promontory, bears N.E. by E. distant 6 miles from Tongue Point; it is 2092 feet high, and has a spur, 1854 feet high, running north-west about 2 miles from it; this spur gradually falls in a westerly direction, and forms the north-west termination of the high land of the Promontory.

From Tongue Point the land trends S.E.  $\frac{1}{2}$  E., forming a deep bight to Leonard Point, southward of which and on the same bearing are Pillar and Norman points, forming the southern boundaries of Leonard and Norman bays.

Norman Island lies a little more than one mile south of Tongue Point, and may be known from having two peaks, the higher and northern of which is 316 feet high. At one and two cables off this island on its eastern side are 9 and 11 fathoms of water, where in the course of the survey it was often found convenient to drop the anchor during a prevalence of south-westerly winds. Coasting steamers of little power bound to the westward, having rounded the Promontory and being met by a south-westerly gale, might find it convenient to anchor here in preference to running back again, and anchoring in Waterloo Bay, to the eastward of the Promontory.

Oberon Bay, lying southward of Norman Point, is the largest of the three bays on this piece of coast, and affords the best anchorage. The bay is one mile deep, 1½ miles across, and has a broad sandy beach upon which the sea breaks heavily. Landing can in general only be effected in the south-eastern corner. From the prevalence of south-westerly winds none of these bays can be recommended as anchorages for other than steam vessels.

From present experience of this locality it would appear that easterly gales die away at East or N.E., but a south-westerly gale may spring up with scarce any notice of its approach, in which case sailing vessels would find themselves on a lee shore with a swell setting them dead to leeward.

From the south-west point of Oberon Bay, the coast trends for nearly a mile in a S. by E. direction, and then takes gradually a more easterly turn to a moderately deep bight, whence it again runs S. by E. to South-west Point. All this coast is bold and cliffy, the cliffs in some places being several hundred feet in height, and rising again at the back towards the mountain land of the Promontory.

* See Admiralty Charts:—Bass Strait, Nos. 1695 and 1695a; Australia, General Chart, Southern portion, No. 2759b. Also, Australia Directory, vol. 1., pages 276 to 278.

Off South-west Point, at a distance of a little more than a mile S.W.  $\frac{1}{2}$  S., is Anser Island, the largest island of the group of the same name.

The Anser Group apparently takes its name from the number of grey frequenting the islands; they are three in number, exclusive of three rocks lying about 40 feet high, which occupy the space between the two outer islands. Anser Island is the highest, and rises to a nipple point, 498 feet above the level of the sea. It is cliffy in all directions, but least so to the northward, where landing may often be effected.

Cleft Island, the most remarkable of this group, lies nearly  $\frac{1}{2}$  miles south-west from Anser Island. It is of a round form, and may be known from having a large slice out of its north-west side, which gives it a cavern-like appearance; it is also perpendicular, and white on all sides.

Two small islets, between 40 and 50 feet high, lie between it and the next or middle island of this group, equally dividing the distance between them. A third islet not quite so high lies one cable off the north-west point of the middle island, which is 312 feet high. Seals inhabit these rocks and islands.

Glennie Group consists of four islands, which lie about 4 miles W.  $\frac{1}{2}$  S. to S.W.  $\frac{1}{2}$  W. from Oberon Point, the nearest land of Wilson Promontory.

Glennie Island, the largest of their number, is 455 feet high, nearly 2 miles long, N.W. by N. and S.E. by S., saddle-shaped, and strewn over with blocks of granite (of which it is composed), and which gives it a castellated appearance. A rock 8 feet high, over which the sea generally breaks heavily, lies about 2 cables north of its northern extreme, and another somewhat larger, 15 feet high, lies about a cable off its north-east end. Three smaller islands lie off the south point of Glennie Island; the southernmost has been named Citadel Island, from its resemblance to an ancient fortress. There is deep water between the Anser and Glennie groups, as also between them and the shore. The whole of the coast adjacent to the island is bold, and all dangers are visible.

Tides.—It is high water at the Glennie Islands, full and change, at 11h. 44m. Range of tide 9 feet.

The Coast.—From South-west Point the land runs E. by S.  $\frac{1}{2}$  S.  $\frac{1}{2}$  miles to a projecting low and stony point, off which, at a distance of one cable W.S.W., is a rock 15 feet high, and in the same direction at a further distance of 2 cables is Wattle Island, 270 feet high, which from being so close to the shore appears connected, but between the island and the 15-feet rock just spoken of is a deep channel, through which a strong tide constantly sets. A rock awash lies nearly a cable south-west of the west point of Wattle Island, but with this exception the coast is bold.

Half a mile from South-west Point a fresh water creek discharges itself, and at a short distance inland, and eastward of this, is a remarkable stone near the summit of the coast range, which closely resembles a tower.

From the low and stony point the coast trends in a generally E. by N.  $\frac{1}{2}$  N. direction to the Promontory lighthouse, which is distant from it  $\frac{1}{2}$  miles; but in this distance there are two deep bights, the westernmost running more than half a mile up into the land, and forming at its termination a natural basin where there is a running stream.

From South-west point to the lighthouse on Wilson Promontory the land rises suddenly from the water's edge to an elevation of nearly 1000 feet.

Wilson Promontory.—The south extremity of Australia is a lofty peninsula 23 miles long in a north and south direction, and about 8 miles broad at the centre. It is connected with the main land to the north-westward by a low sandy neck 10 miles long, and from 3 to 5 miles broad, which separates Waratah Bay from Corner Basin to the north-eastward.

This promontory rises to rugged mountains, some of which are above 2000 feet in height, thickly wooded on their upper and less exposed parts, but towards the shore they are nearly destitute of vegetation, and descend abruptly to the sea. The soil is shallow and generally barren, though the brushwood, dwarf gum trees, and some smaller vegetation, which mostly cover the granite rocks, give the country a deceitful appearance to the eye of a distant observer.

Light.—The lighthouse which stands on the south-east part of Wilson Promontory, E. by N.  $\frac{1}{2}$  N.  $\frac{1}{2}$  miles from the south point, is a white circular stone tower, exhibiting at the height of 383 feet above the level of the sea a fixed light, visible in clear weather 24 miles. This light is seen between the bearings of N.E. by E.  $\frac{1}{2}$  E. and S.S.W., and again visible between the islands of the Anser Group on an E.N.E. bearing.

Bound from the westward and making the light, it may safely be steered for, as all the islands are steep-to.

Landing.—Except when the wind is dead from the southward and fresh, a landing may be effected on one or other side of the lighthouse point, with or without the aid of a crane, which is placed specially for the landing of stores. The first distinguishing pendant denotes that there is landing on the east side, the second distinguishing pendant that there is landing on the west side, and number 5 red flag that there is no landing.

Forty-foot Rocks (formerly Ten-foot Rocks) lie S.  $\frac{1}{2}$  E.  $\frac{1}{2}$  miles from the lighthouse. Captain Kay, R.N., landed on these rocks (a thing not to be attempted once in a year), and thus describes them:—

"Forty-foot Rocks consist of three separate and distinct islets of granite, of which the largest or westernmost was ascertained to be 165 feet long, with a breadth of 50 feet at the broadest part near its centre; this islet is 20 feet high at high water, and on its southernmost extremity there is a granite boulder, which was estimated to be 20 additional feet in height, and 40 feet above high water mark, which, when the sea is breaking over these rocks, is probably the only part of them which is then visible."

By later observations the height is quite correct, and the name of Forty-foot Rocks has been substituted for "Ten." These rocks are bold in all directions.

Rodondo Island, S.  $\frac{1}{2}$  W. 6 miles from the lighthouse on Wilson Promontory, is a conspicuous conical mass of granite, three-quarters of a mile in extent, rising to a distinct peak at 1150 feet above the sea, and visible in clear weather 30 miles from a ship's deck. It has high cliffs on all sides, the surface above being covered with a dense dwarf scrub, and is steep-to in all directions. The Forty-foot Rocks lie N.N.E.  $\frac{1}{2}$  E. 2 miles from Rodondo, and between there is a deep channel of 33 fathoms.

The Tides off Wilson Promontory as a general rule set E.N.E. and W.S.W., the flood stream coming from the eastward. The turn of the stream happens at nearly the same time as it is high or low water by the shore, but the direction of the stream is much influenced by the winds. Near the Promontory, after an easterly gale, the ebb stream which has been checked during the gale continues to run to the eastward when the flood should have made; and at the strength of the flood the combined stream will be found setting to the northward, except inshore, where the tidal streams follow their general law. In like manner a south-westerly gale has an opposite effect.

The velocity of the tide off the Promontory (where they run the strongest) was never found to exceed 24 knots. Along shore to a distance in the offing of 7 or 8 miles from the Promontory to Cape Wollamai, the tides are scarcely felt, but run with their greatest strength off the several points. During and after heavy easterly and westerly weather a current will be found setting in the direction of the wind which is blowing, or has just ceased to blow.

Soundings.—Off Wilson Promontory the soundings afford but little guide, but when to the north-westward, either in the bight between the Promontory and Cape Liptrap, or off Cape Liptrap, a depth of 30 fathoms will ensure a vessel's being 3 miles off shore. This depth will likewise ensure this distance from the land all along the coast as far as Cape Wollamai.

To the southward and south-westward of Cape Patterson the soundings shoal much more gradually than on any other part of this coast, and 30 fathoms or less will be found 6 miles off shore. From thence westward the 30-fathom line again nears the coast until off Cape Wollamai, where it is distant only one and a half miles.

CONDITIONS.

1. All the articles are to be of the best quality of the several kinds, in the best condition, and to be delivered in sound packages, free of all charges for cartage, freight, &c.

2. Bread. A sample of the best ordinarily retailed to the public will be considered as a test loaf for first quality. Second quality to be made of flour known in the trade as "best seconds," and the third quality (that issued for prisoners of the Crown) to be made of flour, the produce of prime wheat, from which twelve per cent. has been extracted in bran and waste.

3. Fresh meat is to be supplied in such proportions as may be required, and, when the quantity admits, to be delivered in fore and hind quarters alternately, also buttocks only when ordered. When shins of beef form a portion of the supply, a fair proportion of the bone, not less than ten inches, must have been cut off. The sticking pieces must be removed from the fore quarters of beef.

4. The supplies coming under the head of Rations and Medical Comforts are to be delivered direct to the establishment entitled thereto on the written order of the officer in charge. All other supplies will be ordered by the head of department concerned.

5. The order issued by the head of department must accompany the goods, and the account is to be rendered simultaneously with delivery of the supplies. In other cases the account is to be rendered, and will be paid monthly. The rates quoted in the orders cannot be exceeded.

6. Should the contractor fail to supply any articles at the time mentioned in the order, they will be otherwise procured, and the expense over and above the contract price will be deducted from his account.

7. In the event of a difference of opinion between the contractor and the officer receiving the supplies as to the quality, the same to be decided, in cases where the article is not of a perishable nature, by a Board of Survey composed of persons named by the head of the department, and the decision of the board is to be considered final. In the event of the decision being against the contractor, the survey fees and expenses, if any, will be deducted as in clause 6.

8. If the board shall decide that the article is not of proper quality, it must be immediately replaced by the contractor; failing which, it will be procured by the officer requiring it, and the expense charged as in clause 6.

9. In cases where the article is of a perishable nature, or when from some other cause injury would be sustained either by the person to whom the rations are due, or to the contractor in waiting for a Board of Survey, the head of the department, or officer in charge of the station, will have power to reject such article or articles as are obviously of inferior quality, it being understood that he will be responsible to the Government for so doing, and that the contractor must take back the rejected article and supply good in its stead; failing which it will be obtained by the officer requiring it, and the expense charged as in clause 6.

10. A repetition of irregularity in the quantity or quality of the supplies, or delay in delivering or replacing them when required, will subject the contractor, upon report of the Tender Board, to such mulct, not exceeding £50, as the Government may direct, and the amount will be deducted from the contractor's account as in clause 6. It will also be in the power of the Government to terminate the contract forthwith.

11. Contractors are not at liberty to transfer their contracts under cover of power-of-attorney, coupled with an interest or otherwise, and no such transfer will be recognized by the Government.

12. It will be competent for the Secretary to the Tender Board, on behalf of the Government, or the contractor, on his own behalf, to terminate the contract, by giving, in writing, a notice of three full calendar months, it being understood that such notice can be given only from the first day of the month, and within the period for which the contract is made. It will also be competent for the Secretary to the Tender Board to terminate the contract, without notice, on infringement of condition No. 11, or should there be reason to know that the contractor takes advantage of his contract to communicate improperly with a prisoner.

13. In the event of any alteration in the Tariff affecting any of the items included in these contracts, the Government or the contractor, as may be the case, will make a proportionate allowance, by way of deduction from or increase of the price of the item so affected.

14. The contracts entered into under this notice are not to be considered as being infringed or vitiated by the importation of stores for the Government service, or by any contracts made by the Imperial Commissariat, or on account of other Governments; or by the consumption of the produce or surplus stock of any Government establishment.
