[The substance of this Notice, as soon as it is received on board, is to be inserted in red ink on the Charts affected by it; and introduced into the margin, or otherwise in the page, of the Sailing Directions to which it relates. See Instructions, Navigation and Pilotage, p. 172.]

[No. 7.]

SOUTH ATLANTIC OCEAN.

Icebergs.

LARGE numbers of Icebergs and detached masses of ice having been fallen in with in the months of September and November 1869 by vessels homeward bound round Cape Horn, extending in the 42nd meridian of West longitude as far north as the parallel of $42\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ South latitude: It is recommended that vessels taking this route should sight, or pass a moderate distance eastward of the Falkland Islands, and should not steer eastward of a N.E. by N. course (true) until northward of the parallel of 40° .

By a reference to the Admiralty Ice Chart of the Southern Hemisphere (No. 1241) it will be seen that Icebergs and drift ice have been met with in the months of March and April between the meridians of 20° and 25° West as far north as 40° , and as it appears that exceptionally large quantities of ice are now adrift in the South Atlantic, vessels bound eastward round the Cape of Good Hope are cautioned accordingly.

By Command of their Lordships,

Hydrographer.

THE following information on the Santa Cruz Islands and the New Hebrides Group, received from the Hydrographical Department of the Admiralty, is published for general information.

[It is recommended that the information contained in this Notice should be carefully considered, noted in the Sailing Directions, and compared with the Chart when the ship is navigating the parts to which it refers.]

HYDROGRAPHIC NOTICE. No. 40.

Pacific Ocean. Western Part.

The following information on the Santa Cruz Islands, and the New Hebrides Group, has been compiled from letters and observations received from Navigating Lieutenant Thomas Capel Tilly, R.N., of the Mission Schooner Southern Cross.*

(All bearings are magnetic. Variation 9° easterly in 1869.)

Santa Cruz Islands.—The positions obtained of prominent points in these islands agree fairly with those of D'Entrecasteaux, and place north point in lat. $10^{\circ} 40' S.$, long. $166^{\circ} 0' 30'' E.$, and north point of Tinkula or Volcano Island in lat. $10^{\circ} 23' 30'' S.$, long. $165^{\circ} 47' 30'' E.$ There is evidently an error in Captain Wilson's account of a low island which he describes as lying S.S.W. from Volcano Island; this bearing should be N.N.E., which would agree with the position of an island now known as Nukapu; the two other islands spoken of as having been seen after "steering W. by S. about five leagues" would be Anologo and Nupani.†

The Matema or Swallow Islands, forming part of the Santa Cruz Group, lie to the northward of the great island, and between the parallels of $10^{\circ} 4'$ and $10^{\circ} 22' S.$, extending from long. $166^{\circ} 39' E.$ to $166^{\circ} 19' E.$, occupying an extent of about forty-two miles in a W. by N. direction from Nimanu, the south-eastern of the group, to Nupani, the north-western; they are from 100 to 200 feet above the sea, and are dangerous from the extensive reefs which stretch out, especially from the western or lee sides. The inhabitants are rough and fearless; they come off eagerly to barter mats, bows and arrows, for iron, and appear to be bold navigators, sailing in their double canoes as far as Tucopia, which lies about one hundred and eighty miles to the south-east.

* See Admiralty Charts:—Pacific Ocean, Sheet VI., No. 2464; New Oaledonia and New Hebrides Islands, No. 1380.

† See Flindley's South Pacific Ocean, pages 655 and 660.

Nimanu, the south-eastern island of the group, is in lat. $10^{\circ} 21' S.$, long. $166^{\circ} 17' E.$, and lies N.N.E. 25 miles from the eastern high land of Santa Cruz; it is a small round bold-looking island some 200 feet high, with apparently deep water all round; there is a land slip and probable landing-place on its lee side.

Panari, the eastern island of the group, lies in lat. $10^{\circ} 17' S.$, long. $166^{\circ} 19' E.$, distant about four miles N. by E. $\frac{1}{2}$ E. from Nimanu, to which it is similar in size and appearance, but not quite so high; it is well wooded; on the western side there is a small bight with a steep white beach; from this there appeared to be communication with the nearest part of Lomlom, the next island, about three-quarters of a mile distant.

Lomlom runs E.N.E. and W.S.W. about 5 miles long by $1\frac{1}{2}$ broad; it is from 150 to 250 feet high, and forms, with another island whose name is unknown, a smooth-water bay open to the northward, the shores of which are composed of rough beaches fringed with narrow reefs. Lomlom appears to be clear of dangers except off its south-west extreme, where a reef extends about S.S.W. for $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile; the reef then trends to the northward towards the second island, with several large rocks or islets within its edge.

The second island is similar to Lomlom in size, running north and south $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles long by less than one mile wide, and between 100 and 200 feet high; the weather or eastern side is bold, and from a bluff on the north-east coast commences an extensive coral reef, trending first N.W. for about 4 miles to Nivuli, the next island (which it surrounds), and then runs about W.S.W. for nearly 13 miles. The villages on these islands are probably situated inland, or on the eastern side which faces the lagoon, as only one hut, resembling a boat-house, was seen from the sea.

Nivuli lies about one mile from the second island of Lomlom, and is a mile long N.W. and S.E., and 120 feet high. The reef runs close round its north-east side, and then trends to the west and south-west for about two miles, forming a bay with a low rock on the edge; a small round islet about 35 feet high lies half a mile within the reef. From the rock the reef runs to the westward.

Pileni, the next island westward of Nivuli, from which it is distant 3 miles, runs N.W. and S.E. about one mile in length; it is about 100 feet high, and there is a village on its south-west point. Pileni lies outside the great lagoon, but is surrounded by a reef, which passing close round its eastern side extends about three-quarters of a mile to the south-west from its western shore; there is apparently a deep-water channel between the main and the Pileni reefs.

Sand Islet is merely what its name indicates; it is small, about 10 feet above water, and without vegetation, the natives resorting to it only to fish. This islet lies on the western side of an oval ring of coral, about one mile long, N.N.W. and S.S.E., similar to that of Pileni, and also without the main lagoon, and is the only example in this group of the reef extending to windward of the land to which it is attached. There is a clear space of $\frac{1}{2}$ mile between this reef and that of Pileni, and also a deep-water channel of three quarters of a mile between it and the edge of the main reef.

The Great Reef.—From the Sand Islet the western entrance of the main lagoon bears nearly S.W., distant about $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles. This extreme lies in lat. $10^{\circ} 14' S.$, long. $166^{\circ} E.$; from it Tinkula bore S.W. $\frac{1}{4}$ W. 17 miles, the eastern high land of Santa Cruz S. by E. $\frac{1}{4}$ E. 28 miles, and Nukapu N. by W. $\frac{1}{4}$ W. 7 miles. From this extreme the reef trends sharp round to the eastward, forming the north side of an apparently deep-water entrance to the lagoon, between the west point and the south-west patch, a reef about 2 miles long, lying S.E. by E. $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles from the point.

Eastward of the south-west patch, with an apparently deep-water channel $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile wide between them, lies another narrow patch of coral nearly 3 miles long; between this and the reef from Lomlom Island is a third patch, the channels on either side into the main lagoon appearing to be deep, and apparently leading to a secure anchorage under the lee of the northern, Lomlom Island, the coast of which appeared to be beach with villages built near it. The interior of the main lagoon seemed to be patchy, but little could be distinguished from the mast-head of the Southern Cross.

The current was found setting to the south-west along the north side of reef, and overfalls were experienced off its western point.

Matema, the only island on the southern side of the great reef, lies about midway between Lomlom Island and the west point, being nearly 6 miles on a W. by N. bearing from the southern extreme of the Lomlom reef. It is a small island, 100 feet high, shaped like a boat, inhabited (the landing being on the western side), and surrounded by a reef which extends about one-third of a mile from the coast. There is apparently a narrow passage between this island and the middle coral patch of the main reef.

Nukapu lies to the north-west of the great reef, and bears W.N.W. about 8 miles from the Sand Islet; it is narrow, about 120 feet high, and nearly one mile long, N. by W. and S. by E., with a low termination to the southward, where appeared to be the villages; a reef encircles the island, passing close to its eastern shore, but extending about $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile from its western side.

Anologo and Nupani, the western islands of the Matema group, are similar to Nukapu in size and shape; they are surrounded by an extensive and irregularly shaped reef, which, passing close to their eastern sides, stretches out to the south-west for nearly 3 miles from Anologo, the southern of the two islands.

Anologo lies W. $\frac{1}{4}$ S. about 17 miles from Nukapu, running east and west about one mile long; it is nearly 120 feet high, and is situated in the eastern angle of the reef surrounding the two islands.

Nupani lies N.W. $\frac{1}{2}$ N. about two miles from Anologo, the reef forming a bight between; it runs north and south about one mile long, and 120 feet high, the northern point being in lat. $10^{\circ} 4' S.$, long. $165^{\circ} 40' E.$ The reef passes close along the east and north sides of Nupani, from whence it trends to the westward for half a mile, thence sweeps round to the southward and eastward for $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles, from whence it stretches out to the south-west, forming a large and dangerous bight of smooth water nearly four miles between the horns. This south-west angle of the reef which breaks lies S. by W. $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Nupani, S.W. $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Anologo, and is in lat. $10^{\circ} 8' S.$, long. $165^{\circ} 39' E.$ From this point the reef runs east 2 miles to its south-east extreme, which lies south distant $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile from Anologo; the sea breaks heavily along this part of the reef.

NEW HEBRIDES.

(Variation $9^{\circ} 40'$ easterly in 1869.)

Paama, one of the southern islands of the New Hebrides, lies north and south, about 5 miles long by $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile broad; its height ranges from 1700 to 1900 feet, presenting an uniform outline from a distant offing.

The approximate position of the southern point (with reference to the neighboring island) is lat. $16^{\circ} 30' S.$, long. $168^{\circ} 10' E.$ and it lies 3 miles from Duanā Point, the north-west extreme of Api or Tasiko Island. The eastern side of Paama appears from the offing to be clear of dangers and steep-to; it is bold, coming steep down from the ranges.

Close off the south point lie a cluster of rocks, the largest of which is known as the Nine-pin; the whole are encircled by a reef extending about a quarter of a mile from the shore. This reef shelters a small bight with a rough stony beach lying westward of south point; the slopes of the hills above this bight were cultivated. Half a mile westward of the reef a discolored patch was seen, but it was not examined.

From south point the coast trends to the north-west for $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile, with rough beaches and fringing reefs; it then runs north and south for the length of the island with smooth water. About three-quarters of a mile N.W. of the south-west point, and half a mile from the shore, lies a patch about 200 yards in extent, on which there is only an occasional break; it is therefore dangerous if approached from the southward with the sun ahead; from its outer edge the south-west point and coast of Paama bears S.E. $\frac{1}{2}$ S., and the north-west extreme of the island bearing N. by E. clears it to the eastward. There is another shoal nearer to the shore and about three-quarters of a mile to the northward of this patch, but the water being smooth there was no break in it.

No other outlying dangers were observed till near the north-west extreme, when a little to the southward of this point, and close to the shore, there is a small patch, and a short spit runs off the northern point. The general character of the western coast is successive beaches of rough coral, with considerable cultivation on the lower slopes of the north-west ranges. A village was observed about $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile southward of the north-west point, and the whole coast is evidently inhabited.

WEATHER SIGNALS, PILOT STATION, MORETON BAY.

IN consequence of the use of Marryatt's Signals being discontinued in this colony after the 31st instant, the direction of the wind and state of the sea at Cape Moreton will, after that date, be signalled from the flag-staff at the pilot station, to vessels outward bound, as follows:—

At the masthead, the direction of the wind will be shown by the compass signal section 1, part I. of the Commercial Code.

At the north yard-arm, the state of the sea, by the following flags:—

- W—0 Smooth, with slight undulation.
- Q—1 Short sea or slight swell.
- S—2 Moderate sea or swell.
- J—3 Considerable sea or swell.
- L—4 Heavy sea or swell.
- V—5 Very heavy sea or swell.
- N—6 Very heavy sea and very heavy swell.

With the exception of W and N, which are very seldom required, the number of divisions in the flags will point out the number indicating the state of the sea.

These signals will be hoisted as soon after sunrise as possible, and kept flying for an hour, and they will also be exhibited at such other times as may be required.

When necessary, the force of the wind will be signalled by the Commercial Code (either at the same time or immediately afterwards) from the south yard-arm. The force being indicated by the usual numbers 1 to 12.

When vessels are lying off the watering-place, the signals will, when practicable, be repeated from the Spitfire. The compass signals being shown at the mainmast, and the state of the sea at the foremast head.
