ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

THE Governor has directed the subjoined Circular Despatch and Enclosures from the Right Honorable the Secretary of State for the Colonies to be published for general information.

By His Excellency's Command,

J. M. GRANT,
Chief Secretary.

Chief Secretary's Office,
Melbourne, 26th July 1882.

[Circular.]

Downing street, 31st May 1882.

Sir,—I have the honor to transmit to you, for publication in the colony under your Government, in such manner as may appear best calculated to secure general attention, 23rd March, copies of two letters from His Royal Highness the 25th March, Prince of Wales, accompanied by reports of the proceedings which have recently taken place in this country in connection with the proposed establishment of a Royal College of Music. I also enclose copies of a paper explaining the terms on which it is proposed that Scholarships shall be founded.

It will be perceived that any locality desiring to promote the objects of the proposed College may do so by founding one or more Scholarships in the College, for the advantage of persons residing in such locality, to be competed for under regulations to be hereafter made; and that private individuals will be enabled, either to found Scholarships, and thus to have the nomination of students from the colony to which they belong, or simply to contribute to the general subscription fund.

I have, &c.,
KIMBERLEY.

The Officer Administering the Government of Victoria.

[Enclosures.]

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales to the Earl of Kimberley.

(Copy.)
Marlborough House,
Pall Mall, S.W., 25th March 1882.

My Lord,—I am anxious that no possible steps should be omitted which may be calculated to bring the proposal to found a Royal College of Music under the favorable notice of Her Majesty's subjects in the colonies.

It appears to me that the communication, which I request you in the accompanying letter to be good enough to transmit for the information of the Governments of the various colonies might advantageously be supplemented by a somewhat more general distribution within these colonies of the proceedings which have taken place here in connection with the movement.

The object of such distribution would be to awaken public interest among all classes of Her Majesty's subjects more thoroughly than even proposals on the part of any of the colonial Governments to extend their practical aid are calculated to do.

I have therefore directed further copies of these proceedings to be transmitted to you, and would again request that your Lordship will be good enough to forward these further copies for distribution among such religious or educational institutions, municipal or other public bodies, or private persons in the various colonies as may be thought most likely to help the project.

I trust that the efforts now being made here may meet with general support on the part of the clergy of all denominations in the colonies, and that they, as well as the heads of colleges and municipal bodies, may interest themselves in their several localities to make known the advantages offered by the establishment of the Royal College of Music, and especially that all these advantages (including free instruction) will be open as unreservedly to Her Majesty's colonial subjects as to those residing in the United Kingdom.

Her Majesty's colonial subjects have indeed already shown that the possession of musical talent exists among them in as great a degree as in any other nation; for they may claim with pride that they have produced one of the most accomplished vocalists of the present day.

I have in past years had occasion in many ways, especially through the medium of the various International Exhibitions over which I have presided, to notice the manifold benefits which have resulted from the combined action of the colonies and the mother country in the development of commerce and the advancement of industrial and other material interests, and I cannot but think that the friendly rivalry of all portions of the empire will not now be wanting in the effort to cultivate a refined and elevating pursuit, which, in all ages and among all nations, has exercised so important an influence on national character, and done so much to strengthen the common love of country.

I have the more confidence in making this appeal from the readiness and public spirit which the colonies have always evinced to promote every object tending to strengthen the ties that now so happily unite us.

Your Lordship will, I am sure, be glad to learn that I have had the advantage of communicating with a number of gentlemen resident in several of the colonies, who are temporarily in England, as well as with former colonists permanently residing here; and they have kindly undertaken by their individual exertion to further the present more extended movement, which I trust will also meet with your Lordship's encouragement and approval.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) ALBERT EDWARD P.

The Earl of Kimberley, &c., &c., &c.

The Prince of Wales to the Earl of Kimberley.

Marlborough House,
Pall Mall, S.W., 23rd March 1882.

My Lord,—I have the honor to transmit, herewith, copies of the proceedings which have recently taken place here in connection with the proposed establishment of a Royal College of Music, which I would ask your Lordship to be good enough to transmit to the Governors of the various colonies, with such observations as your Lordship may consider proper.

I need not state to you how anxious I am to secure the co-operation of the Government of the several colonies, and of our fellow-subjects residing here, in the present movement.

I do not, however, presume to suggest in what form their support should practically be given, but must leave it to the Governments of the various colonies to evince their interest in such manner as each may consider becoming.

I trust that this movement may meet with your Lordship's support, and that you may feel warranted in commending it to the favorable consideration of the Governors of Her Majesty's colonies.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) ALBERT EDWARD P.

REPORT OF PROCEEDINGS AT THE MEETING AT ST. JAMES'S PALACE, ON TUESDAY, 28TH FEBRUARY 1882.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, K.G., in the chair.

This meeting, which had been convened by special invitations from the Prince of Wales, was held in the Banqueting Room, at St. James's Palace.

On taking the chair at Twelve o'clock, His Royal Highness spoke as follows:—

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN—Before commencing the proceedings of the day, I am anxious to read two letters, one from the Duke of Connaught, and the other from Prince Christian. The Duke of Connaught says:—"I have received your special invitation to the meeting in St. James's Palace for Tuesday next, for promoting the establishment of the Royal College of Music; but to my great regret, other duties elsewhere will prevent my attendance, for no one can sympathise more with the movement; and I hope the meeting will be a great success."

PRINCE CHRISTIAN writes as follows:—"Sir.—I write to express my great regret that most urgent private affairs, which detain me in Germany, prevent my attending the meeting to be held by you on the 28th February, with a view to making an appeal to the public in support of the Royal College of Music. It is now more than three years since you did me the honor of appointing me chairman of an executive committee for the promotion of the Royal College of Music. The committee was charged with the duty of establishing a College of Music on a more permanent and extended basis than any existing institution, and as subsidiary to the former object it was directed to invite a union between the Royal Academy of Music and the National Training School. We lost no time in addressing ourselves to the task of effecting this union, and within a month after our appointment the directors of the Royal Academy decided, by a majority of ten to four, and the National Training School unanimously, that it was expedient that the proposed union should be effected, and each of the institutions interested appointed a sub-committee to carry this union into effect. The consideration of the details of the union was, from various reasons for which my committee was not responsible, protracted over a considerable period, but at length the committee appointed by the Royal Academy to consider the subject, after prolonged negotiations, was understood to accede to the terms of the draft charter. The assent of the Training School was also secured. A further time elapsed, owing to the illness of Lord Dudley, the president of the Academy; when, to my great disappointment, the directors of the Royal Academy rescinded their former resolutions, and declined to carry the union into effect. I have stated these facts to clear my committee from the imputation of having unnecessarily delayed its proceedings. Under the foregoing circumstances, the duties of the committee have naturally become merged in the higher function which belongs to your Royal Highness, as President, of appealing to the public to effect the main object which your Royal Highness had in view in appointing the committee—namely, that of creating a College of Music which should occupy the same position in relation to musical art in the United Kingdom as in Germany is occupied by the Conservatoire of Berlin, in France by the Conservatoire of Paris, and in Austria by the Conservatoire of Vienna. It remains only for me again to express my sorrow that I cannot be present at a meeting which I do not doubt, will constitute a new era in the history of music in the United Kingdom."

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES then addressed the meeting as follows:—I have called you together to day, the representatives of the counties and towns in England, the dignitaries of the church and other religious and educational bodies, distinguished colonists, and the representatives of foreign powers, to aid me in the promotion of a national object by obtaining contributions for the establishment of a Royal College of Music.

Were the object less than of national importance, I should not have troubled you—the heads of social life—to meet me here to-day, and I should not myself have undertaken the responsibility of acting as the leader and organizer of the movement. I have invited to meet you the leading musicians, and publishers of music, the most eminent musical instrument makers and patrons of music, and I trust that by the co-operation and union of these, the most powerful elements of society, we may succeed in establishing a Royal College of Music on a more extended basis than any existing institution in the United Kingdom; worthy alike of this meeting and of this country, for whose benefit you are asked to give your time, your money, and your influence. (Cheers.)

I do not propose to trouble you with any proofs of the advantages that would be derived from the establishment of a National College of Music. That subject has been fully discussed by the Duke of Albany at Manchester (hear, hear) and his address is before the world. He showed that relatively to foreign countries England occupied three centuries ago a higher place in the musical world than she does at the present time, and he proved that the almost universal establishment of central and national musical institutions abroad, and the want of such an institution in England, had been one cause why musical progress has not in this country kept pace with the increase of wealth and population and the corresponding development of science and art.

Again, the necessity of public aid formed the ground work of the appeal made at Manchester by the Duke of Edinburgh and Prince Christian. Music, as they showed, is far more expensive to teach than other arts, and the natural capacity for instruction in music is more rare than in almost any other art. You are compelled then, if you would have good musicians, to provide means by which those to whom Nature has been bountiful in giving good ears and good voices, but niggardly in giving worldly wealth, may be sought out in their obscurity and brought up to distinction by a proper course of instruction. (Hear, hear.)

What I have said naturally leads me to deal with free education in music, coupled in certain cases with free maintenance of the pupil, as the first branch of the subject on which I desire to engage your sympathies and ask your aid. This system of gratuitous education is one of the principal features which will distinguish the new College from the Royal Academy and other excellent existing Schools of Music. I do not mean to say that we intend to exclude paying pupils. To adopt such a course would be to deprive musical ability in the upper classes of any means of access to the College and would stamp it with a narrow and contracted character, which is above all to be avoided in a national institution intended to include in its corporate character all classes throughout the kingdom. What I seek to create is an institution bearing the same relation to the art of music as that which our great public schools, Eton and Winchester, for example, bear to general education. On the one side you have scholars who are on the foundation and educated by means of endowments; on the other side pupils who derive no direct benefit from the foundation. Both classes of pupils follow the same course of study, their teachers are the same, their rewards are the same. They differ only in the fact that the Colleges derive aid from the College, while those who are not on the foundation pay for the whole of their education.

I lay great stress on this combination of the two systems of education—that by endowment and that by payment. Financially it enables us to have salaried teachers of the greatest eminence, who will give so much of their time as they devote to teaching exclusively to the instruction of pupils at the college.

But more than all, a union of different classes in a common and elevating pursuit, is the best mode of binding in one tie of common enthusiasm the different grades of society, varying alike in wealth and social influence. Each has much to learn from the other, and this learning is best acquired in an institution where all meet on common ground and on a footing of artistic quality. (Hear, hear.)

A further object, and one most material is sought to be attained by including in our college persons who do not intend to make music their profession. To advance music as an art in its highest aspects, resort must be had to those who possess the best opportunities for general mental culture. The most highly educated classes are those who have the greatest power of disseminating the influence of art throughout the country. They are the sources from which the civilizing stream proceeds downwards and penetrates through every channel of our complex social life.

I will now proceed to explain the details of the scheme for which I ask your support, beginning with the foundation as being that branch of the college for which public money will be required. The least number of scholars which would be worthy to constitute a foundation for the college would be one hundred; of these fifty should have their education free and fifty should be maintained as well as educated. These scholars will be selected by open competition throughout the United Kingdom. A system of examination will be organised by which every town, nay, every village in the kingdom may be afforded a chance of participating in the public benefaction. Only let eminent ability be found in the village choir, the pupil will be brought to London and may, if he do but possess the requisite ability, become a Beethoven or Mendelssohn, and any school of music may put forward its best pupil as a candidate for collegiate honors. The expense of maintenance and education of pupils I estimate at about £80 a year; that of education alone at about £40 a year.

I should hope also that your liberality will grant me means to found at least two fellowships, in order that rising musicians who have acquired distinction at the college may not be tempted, on commencing their professional career, to sacrifice the higher aspirations of their art to the necessity of providing immediate means of subsistence. (Hear, hear.)

Having settled the number of our foundationers, where are we to place them? In London, I need not say, land is sold by the yard, and not by the acre, and a square yard in a good locality is often equal in value to a square acre in a remote district. Yet for the health of a young community we must have open space and pure air, and space is particularly necessary in a music school, for, as the Duke of Edinburgh showed in his address at Manchester, pupils in an ordinary school may be grouped and classified, but musical pupils require space for the performance either of vocal or instrumental music and the individual attention of their masters, to an extent quite unknown in the education of pupils in other branches of knowledge.

Again, the locality in which a school is placed must be of easy access in order to accommodate the staff of teachers; for though I hope to have a resident staff to a greater extent than has yet been tried in any other musical school, yet undoubtedly extra-teaching must form a considerable portion of our instruction.

Now on the point of site I am happy to say I can give the meeting the most satisfactory assurance without making any call on their liberality. It is due to the foresight of my father, the Prince Consort, that, at a time when South Kensington was comparatively remote from London, the large estate held by the Exhibition Commissioners was purchased with a view to furnish sites for future public buildings. In the few years that have elapsed since that purchase a suburb has been converted into a city. The estate lies between the two stations of the Metropolitan District Railway, and is skirted on the north by one of the most frequented roads in the metropolis. Here already we have a nucleus for the college in the building constructed by the great liberality of Mr. Freake, and I am enabled to state, as Chairman of the Commission of 1851, that in proportion as the public contributions enable us to construct our buildings, in the same proportion will the commissioners be prepared to grant a sufficiency of site on which to erect them.

The commissioners have also a considerable portion of the Albert Hall under their control, and by connecting that hall with the new college by a tunnel or bridge, practising rooms, sitting rooms, dining rooms, and two small theatres will be immediately at the disposal of the college. The commissioners will also be prepared to assist the college with an annual grant of money.

To maintain the college with 100 pupils on the foundation, apart from the expense of buildings, an income of not less than from £10,000 to £12,000 a year will be required.

The plan will admit of any degree of development in proportion as the munificence of the public or the Government supplies the requisite funds.

A charter for incorporating the college has already been prepared and laid before the Privy Council. I have myself undertaken to be president. (Loud cheers.) The governing body consists of a council entrusted with the functions of making bye-laws for the regulation of the college, and of an executive committee charged with the details of the administration. The names of the gentlemen who form the council and the executive committee will be published, and will, I am satisfied, command the confidence alike of the public and of the musical world.

I have now laid my plan before you. I commend it to your favorable consideration. A few words I would fain add to prevent any misunderstanding of my intentions. I have not brought you here to ask your aid for the support only of a school calculated to advance music by giving the best instruction continued over a course of years. This might be done by strengthening existing schools. I have not brought you here for the sole purpose of asking for charitable aid, whereby to educate young and deserving musicians. Such an institution is but a branch of what I desire to found. My object is above and beyond this. I wish to establish an institution having a wider basis and a more extended influence than any existing school or college of music in this country. (Cheers.) It will teach music of the highest class; it will have a foundation for the education, and in some cases for the free maintenance of pupils who have obtained by merit the right to such privileges. But it will do more than this. It will be to England what the Berlin Conservatoire is to Germany, what the Paris Conservatoire is to France, or the Vienna Conservatoire to Austria—the recognised centre and head of the musical world. Why is it that Germany, France, and Italy have national styles of music? Why is it that England has no music recognised as national? It has able composers, but nothing indicative of the national life or national feeling. The reason is not far to seek. There is no centre of music to which English musicians may resort with confidence, and thence derive instruction, counsel and inspiration. I hope by the breadth of my plan to interest all present in its success. You who are musicians must desire to improve your art, and such will be the object of the Royal College. You who are only lovers of music must wish well to a plan which provides for all classes of Her Majesty's subjects a pleasure which you yourselves enjoy so keenly. To those who are deaf to music as practical men, I would say thus much—to raise the people you must purify their emotions and cultivate their imaginations. To satisfy the natural craving for excitement you must substitute an innocent and healthy mode of acting on the passions for the fierce thirst for drink and eager pursuit of other unworthy objects. (Hear, hear.) Music acts directly on the emotions, and it cannot be abused, for no excess in music is injurious.

In laying this great national question before you I have followed the example of my father (cheers) by offering to place myself at the head of a great social movement. (Renewed cheers.) I have asked you for assistance, I await your answer with confidence; I am sure that it will be worthy of the nation of which you are representatives.

To you, my Lords Lieutenant, I would address myself with an intimation that I trust you will assemble meetings throughout your counties, for it is desirable that contributions should be received from all parts of the country, as showing the interest taken by the people in music. My Lord Mayor of London and other mayors who are here, I am sure I may hope that you will assist me by presiding at assemblies of your fellow townsmen, and will urge them to contribute to so national an institution. I may, I doubt not, look with confidence to the representatives of the Church and of other religious and educational denominations who have been good enough to attend here, to remind their choirs and their flocks that any contributions will be a grateful testimony that the population of England are interested in improving an art which more than others excites devotional feelings, and inspires with enthusiasm public and private worship.

From those who are directly interested in music, either professionally or as amateurs, I trust I have a right to expect the greatest measure of assistance which they can afford; for on their behalf, and with a view to extend the influence of the science to which they are devoted, we are met here to-day for the purpose of establishing a national central musical institution. I know the loyalty of our colonial brethren. (Hear, hear.) They will not be behindhand in aiding the mother country. From foreign countries I have ever received so many tokens of regard and sympathy that I may look with confidence to them to give their support to an institution the doors of which will be thrown open to all nations.

One practical observation in conclusion. I trust that those present here to-day will each and every of them from time to time communicate to me the steps they are taking to procure contributions, and will forward to the honorary secretary the amount of contributions they may receive.

For my part I will take care, as soon as I am enabled to form some judgment of the extent to which the nation will support this demand, to communicate to the contributors and to the public the details of the foundation and establishment of the College of which I have only set forth in my address the general outline. (His Royal Highness resumed his seat amidst loud and continued applause.)

THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH, who was received with loud applause, said:—In proposing the first resolution of this day's proceedings, it is only necessary for me to add a few remarks to the address of the Prince of Wales. Music has always been a favourite pursuit of mine. From my earliest years I have devoted my leisure hours to the study of it, and I yield to no one in my earnest desire to advance the cultivation of it among my fellow countrymen. (Cheers.) It was more than ten years ago that I made my first effort to found an institution which should be worthy of this country, and though unable at that time to carry my wish into effect, I have never ceased to keep the object in view, but have from time to time endeavored, with more or less success, to carry into effect the idea which I have so dearly at heart, and which I feel to be vitally necessary for the progress of music in England. You may imagine, therefore, how warmly I welcome this meeting, how rejoiced I am at the prospect that with your assistance we are on the eve of accomplishing an object which I have so long been anxious to attain. (Cheers.) In the pursuit of the duties of my profession I have had the satisfaction to visit most parts of Her Majesty's dominions. My reception has in all cases been so cordial, and the welcome given me so loyal and so warm as to convince me that eminent colonists here present will look with favor on a scheme in which the Prince of Wales and I are concerned, and which affects them as much as it does the inhabitants of these islands (cheer)—nay more, I am encouraged to hope that the representatives of the United States of America, a country from which the Royal family has received so much kindness, and which at present sends so many of its most promising youth to the music schools of Germany and Italy, will look with favor on the establishment of a College of Music in this country. (Cheers.) In short, I feel an earnest conviction that all the English speaking races throughout the world will regard the foundation of this College on the scale and principles announced by the Prince of Wales as a fresh bond of union, and will rejoice to know that henceforth a musical education equal to that which they have hitherto been compelled to seek elsewhere, will be attainable in the mother country. A feature of this college, which I desire to impress again and again upon your attention, is that its doors will be open to all comers. That ability will be the only passport to the foundation, and that nationality will be no bar to the attainment of its advantages—this relates to the foundation. On the subject of paying pupils let there be no mistake. We have no desire to exclude earnest students who from circumstances, or the pressure of competition, are unable to obtain entrance on our foundation. Quite the reverse. We shall welcome them, whatever part of Great Britain or the world they may hail from; but we shall expect them to enter the College for the purpose of real study (Hear, hear.) They will have to go through a strict entrance examination; to pursue the same course and conform to the same rules in all respects as the foundation scholars, and thus show that their wish is not to take a few lessons in this or that department of music, but seriously to study the whole. (Cheers.) Our object in the case of all pupils will be to raise the standard of musical education to that which is insisted upon in the best conservatoires elsewhere; to make it systematic and complete. One word only I will add on this topic. To ensure the national success of the most classical music, we must educate our hearers as well as our performers, and how can we do this more effectually than by introducing into our family circles, through the medium of cultivated amateurs, the practice of the highest music in its best and most attractive form? (Cheers.) The general objects of the College are such as I have described, but there are two principal branches of music, differing, it is true, widely in character, but each of great importance, the cultivation of which will, I hope, form a main feature in our educational system. These are sacred music and dramatic music. Sacred music is at present the one class of music which, owing to the careful training of the Church and other religious denominations, and the religious instincts of the people, has obtained in this country a far wider influence than that of any other class. There is hardly a village in the United Kingdom in which the religious services do not testify to the innate love of music to be found in the English people, and the excellence which might be attained by a better and more complete instruction. (Cheers.) This is one of the first wants I trust the College will supply. Our free foundation will encourage the love of music by holding out to every able choir the expectation that some one or more of its members may obtain a scholarship, conferring on the student the advantages of a free education, and in some cases of free maintenance, while the College will constantly maintain for the whole country a reserve of educated and competent teachers. The importance of this subject, however, I shall leave to the Archbishop of Canterbury, who supports me in proposing the resolution. (Cheers.) Dramatic music will also demand the earnest attention of the College. Only recently I have been informed by those best versed in the subject, that the fault of our English dramatic singers is that the hard necessity of earning their bread compels them to appear on the stage with immature faculties and without adequate training. The Royal College will, I trust, cure this defect by attracting those whose ability deserves the advantages which it offers, and by retaining them there till they have completed their education. The urgent want of such a College for the purposes I have named has been brought home to me by the many promises of support which I have received from the musical world on the understanding that dramatic teaching will not be neglected in our system of education. (Cheers.) Before concluding this branch of the subject, I wish to express my own personal hope that the Royal College will not be a mere teaching institution, but will become a centre for groups of affiliated colleges, the members of which will, with the Council of the Royal College, form a musical senate to which all questions of importance relating to music and musicians may be referred for determination. (Loud cheers.) This may, perhaps, be deemed somewhat Utopian, but I do not despair of a time when the musical colleges throughout the country will ally themselves with the Royal College, and form a body united by a common tie and a general system. (Cheers.) I will go one step further, though I do not conceal from myself that I am treading on somewhat delicate ground, and possibly touching on the honored privileges of the universities, yet I will express my personal hope that, as London is the chief city of the United Kingdom, so the Royal College should be the chief musical college, invested with the power of conferring musical degrees, and the source from which all musical honors should legitimately flow. (Cheers.) In proposing the first resolution, it only remains, my lords and gentlemen, for me to express my hope that the Prince of Wales will be supported on the present occasion earnestly and faithfully. (Cheers.) A large sum of money is required for our enterprise. England is rich, and ready at all times to forward a worthy national undertaking. (Cheers.) Why should I say England only, when we are assured of the generous support of our colonial brethren, and when we trust that our American cousins will not be behind in furthering the foundation of an establishment which may act as a home to their musical students on this side of the Atlantic. (Cheers.) The representatives of many foreign countries are here also—we look to them in many cases as examples in our new enterprise, and I feel sure that their kind advice and co-operation will not be wanting when we have occasion to seek it. (Cheers.) I will now read the resolution entrusted to me. It is as follows:—"That this meeting approves of the proposal to establish a Royal College of Music as a national institution, and undertakes that meetings shall be called throughout the country, and the utmost exertions used, individually and collectively, to forward the movement by obtaining the necessary funds for endowing a College of Music for the British Empire."

HIS GRACE THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY said:—"Your Royal Highnesses, my Lords, and Gentlemen, I consider it a very great privilege to be allowed to second the resolution proposed by the Duke of Edinburgh. His Royal Highness has said that I may be expected to say something as to the importance of music in reference to our religious worship. He has himself, in the few words which he has spoken on the subject, treated it so well that it is unnecessary for me to add to what he has said, and what, I am sure, all the members of this meeting already support. But one point, perhaps, I may dwell upon, which is this: Amidst those great diversities of opinion which exist amongst religious men in this free country, there is a wonderful power of uniting us together in this particular department of our worship, to which His Royal Highness has alluded. We could not very safely borrow each other's sermons, for we might become very unorthodox; nay, it would hardly do to use our forms of worship, without any discrimination, alike in all our places of worship, but this much good we are able to do, to use the same hymns, and to join in the same tunes, and thus music is really harmonious in uniting us together in the highest acts of our religious worship. (Applause.) Therefore, your Royal Highness will allow me to say that, not only as holding an important place in the Church of England, but as put forward by your kindness to-day as the representative of the Christianity of the country, I do feel that there is an important duty devolving upon all ministers of religion to assist your Royal Highness in this great work which you have undertaken, and which may be of great religious use, and heal many of those divisions which, unfortunately, separate us from one another. (Applause.) Your Royal Highness has spoken of certain unfortunate people who are deaf to music. I am afraid I must class myself somewhat amongst that number; but I do not think on this account I am the less entitled to appear here to-day. In fact, if it were only to be for musical people, really musical people, and you were to obtain subscriptions for your maintenance from them, I am afraid that the sum you desired to obtain might fail. (A laugh.) Therefore it is a very great advantage that you have some here who are not ashamed to acknowledge that they merely desire that music should prosper, although unfortunately Nature has denied to them the advantage of entering into its full enjoyment. But then there are the advantages which your Royal Highness spoke of, as to the general social advantages to be provided for the community by music. This must find an echo in the most unmusical mind; and therefore we must all rejoice, even at that degree of progress which has been already made, in civilizing our fellow countrymen by those popular concerts which I am so glad to see spreading; and who can tell how much of real moral good has been done through the influence of those various efforts which are but the beginning of the great work which your Royal Highness wishes to see brought to an accomplishment. (Cheers.) Every man who is interested in education must, I think, be interested in music. Formerly, education was divided into three departments, one of which bore the name of music, and although it might have included under that name many things opposite from what we now call music, yet still there was a recognition there of the high place which it ought to occupy in the education of a civilized people. Hence the old universities have been encouraged to confer degrees in music; and perhaps your Royal Highness may not be aware that the humble individual who now addresses you has also the power of making a Doctor of Music. (Laughter.) Of the many duties which I have to perform, that of creating a Doctor of Music is one of the most difficult, especially as I am afraid that were I to subject him to an examination by myself, many unworthy candidates would obtain that high honor. (Laughter.) Therefore it is very desirable that there should be some body, as the Duke of Edinburgh has pointed out, which, being a centre of musical instruction, should also be the centre from which musical honors proceed, and that therefore I should know where to come when I want to have my mind satisfied, that a man is fitted for and worthy of the honor. (Cheers and laughter.) Your Royal Highness, it has been stated in one of the speeches delivered at Manchester by one of your Royal brothers, that a great change took place in Germany in the course of the last 100 years from the introduction of the conservatoire of music. It may be a long time before we see the actual results of the great meeting which is brought together here to-day; but, after all, one hundred years pass very rapidly in the history of a nation. Many of us here present can well look back half a hundred years, and if, in the course of this country's history it shall be found that even a long time is required to produce the full fruits of the effort which is begun this day, we shall have no reason to regret that we have taken, in the practical manner pointed out by your Royal Highness, the furtherance of this great work, which must be most beneficial to the nation. (Applause.)

THE EARL OF ROSEBERY said—May it please your Royal Highnesses, my Lords and Gentlemen, I do not doubt that you share very fully my surprise at my own presumption in addressing such an assembly, but I have been summoned to speak as representing the Lords Lieutenant of Counties on this occasion, and I find it difficult even then to account for my own position, because I am only one of the very least among the Lords Lieutenant, and I can only account for it on the supposition that as there is only one Lord Lieutenant in one county their sense of isolation prevents a feeling of harmony. (Laughter.) In the second place I am more than unworthy as coming from a nation whose distinctive musical instrument—the bagpipe—requires, I will not say a patriotic, but I will say a discriminating ear for its enjoyment. (Laughter.) I can only say that I speak under orders, and that I obey a summons, and that I, like all the assembly here before me, come at the summons of the Princes whose public spirit inspires this country. Sir, I have felt that music is one of those topics which it is easy to realise, but which it is difficult to speak about, and although not quite so unfortunate as His Grace the Right Rev. Primate who spoke last, I am yet one of those beings deemed unfortunate, yet not, I think, so unfortunate as they seem, who appreciate music without any scientific knowledge of it whatever. I think that under these circumstances we unfortunate beings have this consolation, that we derive all the possible enjoyment from music without suffering any of the exquisite tortures to which a more refined ear is liable. (Laughter.) And, Sir, we have this further consolation—no mean one in my opinion—which is, that we are in harmony with the great mass of our fellow-countrymen. I know it is said a divine has written a book on the subject, and it is often said that the English are not a musical nation. Now, Sir, I venture to join issue on that point. I believe, and I am fortified in my belief by the testimony of Mr. Hullah—no mean authority on music (hear, hear)—that there is no nation more distinctively musical than this—no nation more appreciative of music, though not indeed musically instructed; and that is the want that this meeting is anxious to remedy. I think we can prove this by more than one reference, but I do not believe that anybody who has read the history of England for the last three centuries will deny that music and field sports have been the distinctive amusements of Englishmen all those times, and I do not believe that music would play so large a part in the literature of any unmusical nation. I would further urge that our sovereigns during those times, who so faithfully reflect and so largely influence national taste and the national feeling, have all been musical during that time. (Cheers.) If we chose to go further back, we might go to the sovereign of distorted memory and appearance—Richard the Third—who is well-known to have been a passionate musician. But to go no further back than Henry the Eighth—one of the most English of English sovereigns, in his tastes and sympathies—we know he was a practised player upon the lute and the harpsichord; that he practised night and day; that he sang from music at sight; and that he was a composer of no mean order. Queen Elizabeth, of happy memory, sang with taste and feeling. James the First passed an Act in the Scottish Parliament for the better encouragement of musical instruction. Charles the First, the most artistic of English monarchs—it was under him that popular music flourished most in this country, and I take the fact from what I would call the social literature of those days—I mean the literature which reflects the manners and the feelings of Englishmen at the time. In the delightful letters of Howell you find constant references to what he calls the ravishing art of music, which at that time occupied the leisure of his friends. Then we come to the distinguished civil servant, Mr. Samuel Pepys, that exceptional civil servant, of high principle but immoral impulse (laughter)—who, as we know, gives a delightful picture of evenings spent in musical exercise. And last, though not least, I would cite, not a contemporary, but a very distinguished authority—in his delightful study of those days—John Inglesant—recently published, the author of that most interesting work seems, if I may say so, to be saturated himself with the spirit of the 17th century, and he points out in every page that Englishmen of that day delighted in music as a means of amusement, as a means of recreation, and as a means of improvement. It is said that in the 18th century music was not cultivated with the same fervour of devotion that it was in the 17th, but we cannot forget that we owe Handel to the House of Hanover, and that our ancestors were ready to tear their hair and their eyes out in contests over the comparative merits of Handel and Buononcini, the result of which contests still remains in a celebrated epigram of the day. And if we come even to our own benighted century, which is supposed to worship nothing but steam-engines and the Stock Exchange (laughter), I think we may fairly say that a metropolis which keeps in constant and simultaneous operation two opera houses, and a country which opens periodically its cathedrals for the stately purpose of sacred music, cannot be termed an unmusical country. I know it is said that this is music in high places, and that music is not shared in that respect by the millions, but I am not disposed altogether to endorse that view, because no one who has seen the crowd which surrounds a band of music on any holiday, or at any leisure moment, or who has witnessed the power which music in public worship exercises over the masses, can believe that we are altogether an unmusical nation. But at the same time much may be done, and I doubt not much will be done by this meeting to popularize music among the masses of our fellow countrymen. It is in that view that I regard this meeting as of singular importance. It is, as I understand it, to take music from the high places in which she is too much secluded, and to lodge her once more among the hearths and homes of the people of Great Britain. And, sir, if this meeting has accomplished no more than to do something to elevate our national spleen and lighten our national gloom and raise and refine in some degree our national amusement, I do not think that you, sir, will repent having summoned this meeting, nor you, gentlemen, for having co-operated in the formation of this college. (Cheers.)

THE RIGHT HON. THE LORD MAYOR said—May it please your Royal Highnesses, my Lords and Gentlemen, it is customary for the speaker to commence the subject by depreciating the position which he so unworthily holds. On this occasion I feel His Royal Highness has placed me in this position to speak to you as representing the first city in the British Empire, and therefore however unworthy and however little my poor talents may be equal to the task, having taken the responsibility upon me, my best efforts are due both to His Royal Highness and to the audience which I have the honor to address. I feel that a great constitutional and patriotic effort is being made by His Royal Highness, and he has spoken to this meeting with a constitutionalism and a patriotism for which the Royal Princes are so renowned. He has asked me to speak to you who come here from the various cities and towns of the land to take out the blot which may appear on the escutcheon of our country, that we are not so great in music as we are in literature and the sister arts of painting and sculpture. I have always found that the object for which I am asked to appear before the public is not oratorical. Happily for me I have not time to prepare set speeches, and therefore I never annoy by long orations. (Laughter.) My object in addressing you is to urge upon my fellow citizens of this country that from this centre of England's prosperity, this great metropolis of London, shall spring up a bond of union throughout the country and each of our towns and cities shall raise such a fund as may be worthy of the great Prince who has inaugurated it and worthy of the nation he represents. My appeal to you is this, that the towns and the cities of England are nothing if they do not act together. They are as pebbles on the seashore which may rub against each other but can be of no use as a collective force unless they are in unison of action. Now I would ask the mayors and the other representatives of the cities, towns, and boroughs of England to combine with the metropolis upon this occasion to raise, as I said before, such a fund as shall be worthy of this occasion. So far as the Corporation is concerned, I think I may say this, that to the extent of their means (laughter) they will not be found wanting, and what I would suggest to my brethren who are here representing the provincial municipalities is that if they will do me the honor of meeting me before they leave town, I shall be very happy to suggest to them some means by which a national feeling may be raised upon this great and important question. (Hear, hear.)

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS then put the resolution to the meeting, which was carried unanimously.

THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, who was received with loud and prolonged applause, said—Your Royal Highnesses, your Excellencies, my Lords, and Gentlemen. In obedience to the desire conveyed to me, I have very willingly risen to request you to pay a tribute to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales for the part which he has taken on this occasion. (Cheers.) I am to ask you to vote: "That the thanks of this meeting be respectfully offered to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales for having summoned this representative meeting, and for the promise which His Royal Highness has graciously made, that the establishment of the College shall be under his own immediate control and superintendence." My Lords and Gentlemen: Were it not irregular, I should have been inclined to suggest an amendment to my own motion, and to include within its terms the distinct acknowledgments of the meeting for the admirable address which has been delivered by His Royal Highness. (Cheers.) However, adhering to the established order, I will refrain from seeking any more distinct expression of your sentiments than is conveyed in the resolution, and I do think, my Lords, that this is much more than a formal conveyance of our thanks. (Hear, hear.) I believe that a very great service has been rendered by His Royal Highness, and by the members of the Royal Family in the part which they have taken on this occasion, and the special epithet which I would use to describe my special meaning is that, above all, this has been, in my opinion, a timely service. The interesting speeches which we have heard have turned much upon a question that cannot but be of great interest to every Briton, namely, the question how far we are deprived by nature or gifted by nature with what may be called in general terms, the musical faculty. I speak, your Royal Highness, of the musical faculty fully recognising the tone and sentiment expressed by yourself, that to attain to high excellence in music must be the gift of very few, and is generally the result only of a combination of liberal endowments from nature with most laborious and most costly preparation. Now I am bound to say that I take a sanguine view of the capacity of this nation for music. (Cheers.) I believe that the reference to its condition 300 years ago is no unfair or unmeaning reference in this connection. I do not hesitate to say, your Royal Highness, in looking back over the last half century that I have witnessed no change more remarkable among the many changes and the many developments which have marked that half century than the change in the sentiment, and, if I may say so, in the attitude of this nation with respect to music. His Royal Highness, the Duke of Edinburgh has said, and has truly said, that you can now hardly go into a village church in the country without discerning in the services of the church signs of the appreciation of the people for music. But how stood the matter 50 years ago? Your Royal Highness, I must bear this testimony to our Nonconforming brethren, and to those of other religious persuasions than our own, and I believe that music has always been with them a powerful instrument of cherishing the religious life. (Cheers.) But with respect to the music in the congregations and churches of the Church of England 50 years ago, setting apart a very few, and setting apart the service of cathedrals, which still remained as a witness in behalf of better things, I cannot use any epithet weaker than one that may perhaps shock the meeting, when I say that the music in the ordinary churches of the Church of England 50 years ago was a disgrace to the country and to the religion it professed. I remember one particular case, not of an obscure village church, but of a village church hard by one of the ancestral mansions of this country, and where the benefice was held at the time by a member of the family that inhabited that mansion, and in which in utter despair of redeeming the music of the parish from its disgrace, the alternative adopted had been to extinguish it altogether, and the service of the Sunday morning proceeded from beginning to end without a note of music of any kind, and bad as that was, your Royal Highness, I do not hesitate to say, that it was far better than to be doomed to stand and suffer many of the grotesque performances which usually characterised the attempts at that period.

Your Royal Highness, what was at that time the music of the metropolis and the country? The music of the metropolis was the enjoyment of—I will not say the higher class—but of a limited portion of the higher class. As to the middle class and as to the masses of the country, they were entirely excluded from it, and a belief had gone abroad, which I for my part conceived to be nothing else than a grovelling superstition, that the musical faculty, the power of appreciating music, may even also come at any rate slight power of execution in music—the belief was that the musical faculty was absolutely the possession of a few isolated individuals, and that as to the masses of mankind, unless in the most vulgar forms, they had and could have nothing to do with it. Well, your Royal Highness, a name has been mentioned casually in one of the speeches of to-day which I will again repeat because I think it deserves honor in this assembly. It is the name of Mr. Hullah. (Cheers.) Those who are old enough like me to recollect Mr. Hullah, remember him as one not who earned the high distinction of enrolling his name in the illustrious list of great composers, but yet who rendered another service of not less importance, for he it was who I think first embodied and carried into effect as a practical conception the idea of which this meeting marks the growth and the ripeness that music was intended not for the select individuals of a certain class but for the instruction, the benefit and the improvement of the whole masses of the nation. (Cheers.) He carried musical instruction in its most popular form through schools of every description, and gradually laid the ground for familiarising the national mind with belief on which your Royal Highness is now wisely seeking to build the great Institution that you contemplate and without which belief the Institution would have been a hopeless and a visionary scheme. Therefore, your Royal Highness, it is that I venture to say that this meeting is above all things opportune. Fifty years ago all the knowledge that your Royal Highness has exhibited in your address, all the goodwill, all the tact, all the power and social influence that a person in your condition might have commanded would have been utterly thrown away in the attempt to hold such a meeting as the present, or if a matter of deference and compliments representative persons could have been gathered within these walls, yet the effort would have been a barren and unmeaning one. As it is now, the feeling for music has gone abroad through the people so that there is hardly any form in which it does not appear. I most gladly recognise the fact that there has been portions of the country more favored than those to which I have referred as marking the general rule. In Yorkshire, in Lancashire, in Wales, I believe the cultivation of music has never languished, and the strong musical faculty of the people in those districts of the country has made them distinguished at all periods of our history; but that which was the position of a favored few among the inhabitants of the land has now become a general characteristic of the population, and has entered everywhere into its habits. You know, your Royal Highness, the material with which to work. You appeal to us, you appeal to the remarkable assemblage of persons whom you have gathered together within these walls to provide you with the material means of setting on foot an institution for which all the living materials are already prepared in the actual condition of the country. This is the service that your Royal Highness has rendered, and which I for one, most gladly recognise. I have watched this progress with great interest from its beginning to its end. I have seen the superstition to which I referred gradually fade away and melt into thin air. Music is now recognised as an essential part of the institutions of the country. In every village school music is an important and powerful instrument in the hands of the teacher. It has done much towards bringing about the remarkable change which may now be observed in our villages—that the child no longer trudges sulkily to school as was the old conception of work, but trips to it merrily and with the expectation of deriving some pleasure as well as much benefit from the training that he is receiving. In these circumstances I am satisfied that your Royal Highness has exhibited an admirable judgment in the time as well as in the nature of the call which you make upon us, and I cordially with all my heart wish the scheme the success which I am firmly convinced it is destined to achieve. I beg to propose the resolution. (Loud cheers.)

THE RIGHT HON. SIR STAFFORD NORTHCOTE, who was received with cheers, then said—Your Royal Highnesses, my Lords and Gentlemen. I rise and feel it is a great privilege and a great honor that I am allowed to rise to second the vote of thanks which has just been proposed. The Prime Minister has said that if he might have been allowed to add a few words to the resolution he would not only have thanked His Royal Highness for having summoned this representative meeting and for the promise which he has graciously made that the establishment of a college shall be under his own immediate control and superintendence, but that he would also have been glad to have proposed that the thanks of the meeting should be especially given to his Royal Highness for the address which he has this day delivered. I am sure we all share the feeling, but I think we might carry the sentiment even further. It has just been said in eloquent terms that the time is specially opportune for bringing this subject before the nation. That is true, but let us ask now comes the moment to be so opportune, and who are they that have been working to bring about this opportunity? We recognise the great merits and the great services of those who, like Mr. Hullah, have done so much to bring about a feeling in favor of music in the country. But we ought also, I think, to bear in mind this, that in the steps that have been taken towards the establishment of a more organized system of musical education, the Royal Family—His Royal Highness who is now in the chair, His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh, His Royal Highness the Duke of Albany, Prince Christian, and others—have for years been laboring to bring these matters to a substantive point, and let me venture to say this, that we may date the exertions of the Royal Family even further back than that, and that we must carry our minds to one who has been taken from us, but whose spirit has been renewed and kept alive amongst his illustrious sons. (Cheers.) It has always seemed to me that, in spite of the great work which the Prince Consort and other members of the Royal Family have done for the promotion of science and of art, we might compare the work that was done by them with that which has been done, in former times and in other countries, by other royal families for the encouragement of art in a sense most favorable to the action of our own Royal Family. We have heard and known instances in which there have been kings and sovereigns who have patronised art, who have collected professors of different kinds of art about their courts, and who have by liberality, and judicious liberality, encouraged the professors of those branches of knowledge in which it is desirable to promote it; but that which the Prince Consort has done, and that which His Royal Highness desires to do, and which they have been laboring to do, is to promote art and science amongst us, not by the patronage of particular professors, but by bringing the people themselves to appreciate what has been done, and teaching them to educate themselves. (Cheers.) And then, when the proper time has come, when the work has made some progress, when the labors of those who are endeavoring to promote these important branches of education are far advanced, then they have seen the right time to move. As the Prince Consort saw in 1851, in respect to another movement, so we have seen from time to time that they have discerned when the moment has come, and they have been able to say—"The hour has come and the man." I observe that those who have been speaking have generally endeavored to bring some little contribution from their own experience, and I suppose we all of us, whether we are ignorant or otherwise of music, have had some experience more or less confirmatory of what has been said, by the Prime Minister, as to the very great advance of musical education and musical feeling among the people of late years. I come from a county where I know—in parts of it at all events—that there have been singular and even ludicrous illustrations of the depth of ignorance to which our people have fallen in this matter. I know in some of the outlying parishes of Devonshire an old story that used to be told, one with which my family were connected, and in which one of my relations used to live, of an old lady highly respected, who went by the name of Madam —, that the music was given out in the church by the clerk

thus:—"Let Madam and I sing to the praise and glory of God." (Laughter.) I remember another case in which—when some greater progress had been made towards congregational singing that it was not quite as perfect as could have been desired—it is on record that the clerk addressed the choir and exhorted them to abide by the words and let the tune take its course. (Laughter.) But even in those dark parts of the country there have been curious evidences that at one time or another music has been more widely diffused than it seemed to be. I remember being struck some years ago, when present at a party of villagers and persons of the peasant class, hearing a number of songs that were of the most unedifying style of musical composition, though they were very harmless in matter. One of them, however, was a short song, produced evidently during the days, or shortly after the days, of King Harry who was the subject of the song, and there was a great beauty about it, and it came in like a gem in the middle of a great mass of pebbles on the shore. Where it came from nobody knew, neither did they know how it had been handed down to them, but it had always been kept up amongst them as the record, so it seemed to me, of a better time which remained as a sort of waif and stray in a village that musically was otherwise utterly barren. I say, no doubt, the material is there if only you can bring it to account. In our county, bad as we were, we are now making the greatest possible advance. I see villages improving their choirs. I see villages continually meeting to compete with other villages in choral music, and there is evidently a growing feeling and a desire that all this vapour, which is so diffusing itself over the people, should be gathered together as they say of an orator—that he gathers the sentiment of his audience which is in vapour, and returns it to them in the flood; so it is with the work in which we are now engaged, and which in the hands of His Royal Highness, and under his personal supervision I cannot doubt will be brought to a successful issue. It is not only because he sees the moment has come, and has called together those who are the representatives of the different parts of the kingdom, but it is also because of the personal promise he has made that he will give his personal attention to this matter that we look upon it with so much hope. We look upon it with hope on two grounds: we are sure that His Royal Highness would not have made that promise unless he had seen that the time had come, and that the means were available, and that they were such as to attain the object; and we further feel sure that in hands like his it will prosper as many other matters have done that we have seen His Royal Highness engaged in in this country, in the neighboring country, and elsewhere, and as the result of which we know that the interests of art, here and abroad, has prospered. I join heartily in the vote of thanks to him. (Cheers.)

Mr. GLADSTONE put the resolution, which was carried with enthusiasm.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS in replying said:—My Lords and Gentlemen, I cannot sufficiently thank the Prime Minister for the kind way in which he has proposed this resolution, which has also been so kindly seconded by Sir Stafford Northcote, and you for the way in which you have been kind enough to receive it to-day. I need hardly tell you that I have taken the chair at this meeting with the greatest possible pleasure, and it is for me to return you all my most sincere thanks for the support you have given me to-day, and for having come, I know many of you, such long distances, which proves to me also that you have the interests of this great and important subject at heart. I have had the great pleasure as you have had of listening to most interesting and able speeches. After everything that has been said with regard to music, its culture and its education, the subject has been so thoroughly exhausted that it would, I know, be out of place on my part if I were to say anything further. I only trust and hope that, from what you have heard to-day, you have all come to the unanimous conclusion that the establishment of this College of Music will do much for the education of music throughout the length and breadth of the land. I only trust that you have come to the conviction that it is a subject worthy of your support, and that those who represent the great provincial municipalities will be able to interest their fellow townsmen, on their return, in the subject which has been discussed to-day. Before sitting down I wish to say that, amongst the many letters I have received with subscriptions of various kinds, I was much touched by an anonymous one, which is worded in the following terms, and which I only received on entering the Hall to-day:—"£50 has been sent for the Royal College of Music from one whose earliest recollection is the singing of the National Anthem on the occasion of the coronation of the Queen—when, as a poor lad, he joined in the procession of Sunlay School children—in grateful and revered memory of the Prince Consort, and in gratitude for the long and peaceful reign of Her Majesty." (Loud cheers.)

The meeting then broke up.

	Blake,

The PRINCE OF WALES, who was attended by Sir Philip Cunliffe-Owen, Mr. George Grove, the Director, and Mr. Charles Morley, the Hon. Secretary of the college, delivered the following address:—

You are doubtless aware of the efforts at present being made to establish a Royal College of Music—a work which, I venture to think, is one of national importance.

It is intended to place the institution on a broad and liberal basis; that its advantages shall not be confined to residents of the United Kingdom, but be open to our fellow-subjects in all parts of the empire; and the gratuitous education of scholars selected by competition on the claim of merit only will be one of its principal features.

The scheme has been received with marked favor throughout the United Kingdom, but I should consider it wanting in one of its main objects if I did not succeed in enlisting the sympathy and co-operation of our fellow-subjects residing in the Colonial portions of the Empire.

I have on so many occasions experienced the advantages of their ready and earnest concert in promoting schemes of public utility in relation to material progress, that I have some confidence they will exhibit the like friendly rivalry in furthering our efforts in favor of an elevating pursuit, which in all ages and among all communities has exercised no slight influence on national character, and the promotion of which may constitute a bond tending to unite us as strongly in sentiment and feeling as we now are in loyalty and material interest.

For these reasons I was anxious to meet as many of the leading gentlemen connected with the colonies as might now be temporarily in London, as well as those who permanently reside here; and I am gratified at the readiness with which so many of you have acceded to my invitation.

My object is partly to make it understood how much importance I attach to the element of colonial co-operation and sympathy, not only as affecting the immediate success of the work, but bearing on the higher objects of national unity, by inspiring among our fellow-subjects in every part of the Empire these emotions of patriotism which national music is calculated so powerfully to evoke.

I further desired to apprise you of the steps which had been and were being taken to carry out this purpose.

Immediately after the meeting at St. James's Palace I directed that full reports of the proceedings should be prepared, with the view of transmitting them to Lord Kimberley, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, to be forwarded by him for the information of the Governments of the various colonies, in the hope that the goodwill of these governments might be attracted in our favor, and such public encouragement afforded, as they might feel it becoming to extend.

It seemed doubtful, however, whether an official communication of this character was calculated to accomplish the full object we had in view, viz., to stimulate popular feeling and sympathy among our colonial fellow-subjects. It was thought that such an end might be better attained by a direct appeal to themselves and by a more general distribution of the reports of our proceedings among the various institutions, religious bodies, heads of municipalities, and leading persons in the colonies.

I accordingly propose to supplement this communication by a further letter, and to send a sufficient number of copies of our proceedings to meet the necessary requirements, for transmission to the colonies.

I am not insensible to the engrossing nature of the pursuits of colonial life, nor to the claims which material interests have on young communities. We must all recognise with pride and admiration how much the enlightened enterprise and perseverance of our colonial fellow-subjects have already contributed to the greatness and wealth of the Empire; and I am far from suggesting any relaxation of these efforts.

My purpose is to provide for the leisure hours which must come to the busiest among us—no matter where we live or what sphere of life we occupy—an elevating source of enjoyment which is at the same time calculated to strengthen those emotions that have so much influence in perpetuating a common love of country.

I have endeavored in my further letter to Lord Kimberley to convey fully the object I have at heart, and although its terms are in some measure a repetition of what I have now stated to you, I think it well you should be apprised of its contents:

“My Lord,

“I am anxious that no possible steps should be omitted which may be calculated to bring the proposal to found a Royal College of Music under the favorable notice of Her Majesty’s subjects in the colonies.

“It appears to me that the communication which I request you in the accompanying letter to be good enough to transmit for the information of the Governments of the various colonies, might advantageously be supplemented by a somewhat more general distribution within these colonies of the proceedings which have taken place here in connection with the movement.

“The object of such distribution would be to awaken public interest among all classes of Her Majesty’s subjects more thoroughly than even proposals on the part of any of the colonial Governments to extend their practical aid are calculated to do.

“I have therefore directed further copies of these proceedings to be transmitted to you, and would again request that you will be good enough to forward these further copies for distribution among such religious or educational institutions, municipal or other public bodies, or private persons in the various colonies as may be thought most likely to help the project.

“I trust that the efforts now being made here may meet with general support on the part of the clergy of all denominations in the colonies, and that they, as well as the heads of colleges and municipal bodies, may interest themselves in their several localities to make known the advantages offered by the establishment of the Royal College of Music, and especially that all these advantages (including free instruction) will be open as unreservedly to Her Majesty’s colonial subjects as to those residing in the United Kingdom.

“Her Majesty’s colonial subjects have indeed already shown that the possession of musical talent exists among them in as great a degree as in any other nation, for they may claim with pride that they have produced one of the most accomplished vocalists of the present age.

“I have in past years had occasion in many ways—especially through the medium of the various International Exhibitions over which I have presided—to notice the manifold benefits which have resulted from the combined action of the colonies and the mother country in the development of commerce and the advancement of industrial and other material interests, and I cannot but think that the friendly rivalry of all portions of the empire will not now be wanting in the effort to cultivate a refined and elevating pursuit which in all ages and among all nations has exercised so important an influence on national character, and done so much to strengthen the common love of country.

“I have the more confidence in making this appeal from the readiness and public spirit which the colonies have always evinced to promote every object tending to strengthen the ties that now so happily unite us.

“Your Lordship will, I am sure, be glad to learn that I have had the advantage of communicating with a number of gentlemen resident in several of the colonies, who are temporarily in England, as well as with former colonists permanently residing here, and they have kindly undertaken by their individual exertions to further the present more extended movement, which I trust will also meet with your Lordship’s encouragement and approval.

“I have the honor,” &c.

I have no doubt but that the different colonial Governments will exercise a judicious discretion in the use of these papers, and that we may rely on their hearty co-operation and support in applying them to the best advantage.

If there are any gentlemen present who may think themselves warranted by their connections with the colonies in aiding to ensure a friendly reception of my communication there, it will be a source of gratification both to me and my colleagues to view such efforts, so entirely in unison with our own, and to welcome them as fellow-workers in the same cause.

I have thus endeavored to place before you the object we have in view, and the means by which we hope to accomplish it, and I trust you will find both worthy of your support.

I do not, therefore, presume to indicate the precise course which it might be expedient to adopt in any of the colonies, believing that this had better be left to the practical sagacity and zeal of our friends there, who must be considered to have the best knowledge of what plans are most calculated to ensure local success. I have, however, thought that a brief reference to some of the steps which are contributing to our success here, as well as an enumeration, in a comprehensive form, of some of the advantages which the college offers to colonists, might be attended with advantage, and, at all events, serve as a groundwork for their operations.

I have accordingly directed a memorandum in that sense to be prepared, which will be forwarded, with the other papers, to the proper quarter.

In conclusion, I cannot but again express my cordial thanks to the many gentlemen connected with the colonies who have favored me with their attendance to-day, and repeat the expression of my hope, not unmixed with a large measure of confidence, that your encouragement and help may not be withheld from an undertaking which may, I trust, in the fulness of time, prove to be one more of the many fibres in the silken cord that binds the mother country to her colonial offspring.

I would finally say that we shall be most happy to receive any practical suggestion from our colonial friends, either here or resident in the colonies, and that they may communicate, either personally or by letter, with the Honorary Secretary, Mr. Charles Morley, Duchy of Cornwall Office, No. 1 Buckingham Gate, S.W.

He will gladly supply any gentleman with copies of the various proceedings to which I have referred, as well as of those which properly arise out of this day’s meeting.

The meeting was subsequently addressed by the Earl of Kimberley, Secretary of State for the Colonies, in support of the views expressed by His Royal Highness.

His Royal Highness then conversed with several of the gentlemen present, and afterwards withdrew.

Memorandum.

1. The Royal College of Music will be a central institution of the British Empire for the teaching of the art and practice of music to the students of both sexes. It will be situated in London, on the South Kensington Estate of the Royal Commission of 1851.

2. The professors will be the most eminent and efficient attainable in England or elsewhere.

3. The college will furnish a thorough and systematic education in theoretic and practical music in the following branches:—Harmony, counterpoint, and composition; organ, violin, violoncello, wind instruments, singing—including solo, part, chorus, and dramatic singing, with elocution—ensemble and orchestral playing, and the history of music. There will also be instruction in modern languages.

4. The educational year will be divided into terms and vacations as usual.

5. The college will be under the management of a director, the residuary portion, in which the resident students will live, will be under the charge of a matron, and every possible care will be taken to provide for their well-being.

6. The course of education will last not less than three years.

7. There are two classes of scholarships each held for the whole course. (1.) For education and maintenance. (2.) For education only. These scholarships will be obtainable by competition before examiners appointed by the college.

8. Those who fail to pass the scholarship examination, but still desire to be educated in the college, may do so by payment of the fees, but they will have to pass an examination before so doing. It is proposed to authorize certain houses in the neighbourhood of the college for the residence of students from a distance, not on the foundation, on moderate terms.

9. The students at the college will be within reach of all the concerts and performances that go on during the musical season, and which are naturally a great help to study. It is hoped that arrangements may be made for the free admission of the students to the rehearsals of the best concerts.

10. It is intended to found fellowships, available for a term of years, for those who having passed their final examination in college, shall satisfy the examiners of their fitness for such fellowships. The object of the fellowships is to assist rising musicians who, after achieving distinction at the college, might otherwise be tempted to commence their professional careers too early, and thus to sacrifice the highest aspirations of their art to the necessity of earning immediate means of support.

11. As the object of the Royal College is to forward the knowledge and practice of so humanising and elevating an art as music, it is hoped that those who have the welfare of their fellow countrymen and countrywomen at heart will give it all the assistance in their power.

12. Meetings may be held in its support in cities and towns, with the double object of making known the advantages which it offers to children with musical ability, and of obtaining subscriptions towards the foundation.

13. Clergymen may do much in this direction by organising local committees, by preaching on the subject, and collecting donations or subscriptions. Music is one of the main parts of Divine worship, and sacred music cannot fail to benefit by this movement. It is also one of the best domestic pleasures, and a bond of union in family and social life.

14. Magistrates and other official persons, whose object is to promote the well-being of their fellow-citizens, should earnestly support the movement, so well initiated by the Prince of Wales, and do all in their power to obtain subscriptions.

15. Any colony, city, town, or individual may found a local scholarship by subscribing the requisite sum to the funds of the college. This will entitle the locality or person subscribing to have one scholar, boy or girl, educated and maintained for the entire course of education, provided that the applicant have sufficient knowledge of music to pass the entrance examination.

16. By their liberal and enlightened action in founding colleges, museums, and public libraries, the colonies have shown that they are alive to the benefits derivable from literature, arts, and sciences. Music confers equal benefits with the other arts—indeed, in some respects more obvious ones; since the pleasure and profit of such a bond as good music in society or the family circle, good concerts, good music in church, can be appreciated by everyone.

But music cannot be studied as books, paintings, or technological museums can, by the mere use of the eye. It requires a long course of earnest study in some place where music already exists and abounds; where there are teachers duly qualified to teach, and where the best players and singers can be constantly heard.

These advantages cannot at present be found in the colonies, but it is proposed to provide them at the new Royal College of Music.

LOCAL SCHOLARSHIPS.

1. The students of the college will consist of two branches:—

1. Foundationers.

- (a) With maintenance and tuition;
- (b) With tuition only.

2. Paying Pupils.

- (a) Through cash payment;
- (b) Through local scholarships,

2. No foundation scholar or paying pupil will be admitted unless up to a certain standard of proficiency, such standard to be ascertained by examiners appointed or approved of by the college.

3. The college will accept donations for the foundation of local scholarships of such sufficient sums as may be agreed upon, it being understood that the local scholar must pass a test examination up to the standard prescribed by the college. In the event of no candidate reaching such standard, then the interest of the money shall be appropriated to the general expenditure of the college until a satisfactory election shall take place.

4. The capital sum for founding a local scholarship is fixed at £3,000.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.—PRESIDENT, H. R. H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.; DIRECTOR, MR. GEORGE GROVE, D.C.L.

1. The object of the College is to provide a Central Institution for education in Music, of similar nature to the Conservatoires of Paris and Vienna.

II. It will furnish a thorough and systematic education in Theoretical and Practical Music in the following branches:—Harmony, Counterpoint, and Composition, Organ, Pianoforte, Violin, Violoncello, Wind Instruments, Singing—including Solo, Part, Chorus, and Dramatic Singing, with Elocution—Ensemble and Orchestral Playing. There will also be instruction in Modern Languages. It is hoped to obtain admission for the pupils to the rehearsals of the chief metropolitan concerts. The professors will be the most eminent musicians attainable.

III. It is intended, at present, to found Scholarships for the Education of One Hundred Scholars, and for the Maintenance of Fifty. These Scholarships will be open to persons of either sex, within certain limits of age, who shall pass a competitive examination to the satisfaction of Examiners appointed by the College.

IV. The College will also be available for Students, on payment of certain fees to be hereafter determined. The Students will have to pass a strict entrance examination before Examiners appointed by the College; to conform in all respects to the rules of the College; and not to leave before the completion of a prescribed course, unless for reasons satisfactory to the council.

V. It is intended to found Fellowships available for a term of years for those who, having passed their final examination in College, shall satisfy the Examiners of their fitness for such Fellowships. The object of the Fellowships is to assist rising musicians, who after achieving distinction at the College might otherwise be tempted to commence their professional careers too early, and thus to sacrifice the higher aspirations of their art to the necessity of earning immediate means of subsistence.

VI. Ground for the erection of Collegiate Buildings will be provided by the Royal Commissioners of 1851 on their estate; and the College will find immediate accommodation in a house presented to the Prince of Wales, for the purpose, by Mr. C. J. Freake. This house adjoins the Albert Hall, and the College will be allowed the temporary use of the practising rooms, theatres, &c., in that building.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

I UNDERTAKE to contribute £..... to the funds of the College.

Name.....

This paper May be returned to the Honorary Secretary.

CHARLES MORLEY, Esq.,
Temporary Offices,
Duchy of Cornwall Office,
1 Buckingham Gate, S.W.

The Royal College of Music will consist of Two Branches—a Foundation and a Paying Branch, the members of the foundation comprising only persons who attain that distinction by open competition.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has recently received representations from various localities expressing a desire to found scholarships to be restricted to each locality.

His Royal Highness the President has, therefore, decided that scholarships providing tuition and maintenance may be established open to local competition only on payment of a capital sum of £3,000, such scholarships bearing the name of the founder. The candidates must pass an examination before examiners appointed or approved by the College; and if no candidate reaches the required standard of excellence, the scholarship will be applied to the general funds of the college until such time as a sufficiently qualified candidate is offered.

Under these conditions, any locality for each sum of £3,000 may have in perpetuity a scholar in the college designated by the name of the locality.

ALTERATION OF COLOR OF HARBOR LIGHT, NEW PLYMOUTH.

THE New Plymouth Harbor Board has given notice that, on and after the 1st August next, the harbor light exhibited from the flagstaff at Mount Elliott will be altered from white to red. This light is elevated 75 feet above the level of the sea, and is visible from seaward (except where hidden by the Sugar Loaves) from the magnetic bearing of east by north, round by south as far as the coast-line to the northward, or towards Waitara, will allow.

NOTICES TO MARINERS.—NETHERLANDS-INDIA.

THE following Notices, which have been received from the Consul-General for the Netherlands, are published for general information.

JAMES H. GRAVES,
 Commissioner of Trade and Customs.
 Department of Trade and Customs,
 Melbourne, 26th July 1882.

NOTICE is hereby given, that on the northern part of the west coast of the island Madura two lighthouses are erected with the purpose of showing during the night an easy way in and out the eastern channel of the Western entrance to Sourabaya roads.

The southern light is a fixed white catadioptric light of the second order on an iron lighthouse, painted in white, placed near Tandjong Slempt, in the neighborhood of Sembilangan; the northern being a fixed white dioptric light of the sixth order, placed on a white painted lighthouse of open ironwork near Tandjong Piering.

The focus of the first light is elevated 178 feet above the level of the sea, and that of the second light is on a height of 47 feet above the water.

Within a range of visibility of 19 and 9 sea miles the lights are visible between the bearings:

Sembilangan from S. E.  $\frac{1}{2}$  E. through South till S. W.
 Tandjong Piering from N. E.  $\frac{1}{2}$  E. through East and South till S. W.  $\frac{3}{4}$  W.

The lights in line lead clear from all dangers in the eastern channel of the Western entrance to Sourabaya roads.

The eastern channel of the Western entrance thus being illuminated, the light vessel indicating the Wester Channel has been removed, but a white Herberts buoy with staff and frame ball is placed near the northern mouth of the Solo River.

Reefs in Carimata Strait.

The commander of H. N. M. surveying vessel Hydrograaf reports the following, relative to the reefs in Carimata Strait:—

1°. Gualia reef, coral reef, with 4 to 6 feet at low water extending E. and W. 440 yards, N. and S. about 600 yards, with 10 and 12 fathoms around. On the southern edge lies the wreck of the Gualia with her iron bowsprit about 3-feet above the water at low water. No discoloring at low water, sometimes a little surf northward of the wreck.

The wreck is lying with the following bearings:—
 Bliang peak ... S. 23° 15' E.
 Lemam Pako (the easternmost of the Lemam islets) ... S. 61° 5' E.
 Panambangan South peak ... S. 78° 37' E.
 or in: lat. 1° 5' 47" S.
 long. 108° 33' 2" E.

2°. Twilight reef, coral reef, with 1½ fathoms at low water, perhaps less, N.W. and S.E. ¼ cables long and 2 cables broad.

Close to the east and north edge 7 and 9 fathoms was found, on the west and south edge 12 and 13 fathoms, no surf or discoloring of water. The reef is lying about 5 miles N. O. by N. from the wreck of the Gualia, with the following bearings:—

Bliang peak ... S. 16° 15' E.
 Lemam Pako ... S. 49° 0' E.
 Panambangan South peak ... S. 72° 15' E. position: lat. 1° 1' 45" S.
 long. 108° 35' 50" E.

3°. Erikson reef, coral reef, with 4 fathoms at low water, long N. and S. about 2½ cables, and 1½ cable broad, with 10 and 12 fathoms close to the reef. No surf or discoloring.

The centre of the reef is lying with the bearings:—

Bliang peak ... S. 24° 15' E.
 Lemam Pako ... S. 58° 15' E.
 Panambangan South peak ... S. 76° 0' E.
 or in: lat. 1° 3' 15" S.
 long. 108° 31' 20" E.

4°. China reef, with 6 feet on it at low water, long N.N.W. and S.S.E. half a mile, and 2 cables broad. On the west side of this steep reef 12 and 14 fathoms, and on the east side 10 and 13 fathoms white sand, was found. No surf or discoloring. The centre of the reef is lying with the bearings:—

Bliang peak ... S. 21° 32' E.
 Panambangan South peak ... S. 68° 45' E.
 or in: lat. 0° 57' 10" S.
 long. 108° 30' 40" E.

5°. Greig reef, coral reef, with 3 fathoms at low water, but perhaps with patches of less water. N. W. and S. E. ¾ cables in length and about 1 cable broad, with 13 and 14 fathoms around. No surf or discoloring.

The stone with 3 fathoms over it is lying with the bearings:—

Panambangan South peak ... S. 65° 7' E.
 Karimata High peak ... S. 28° 30' E.
 or in: lat. 0° 54' S.
 long. 108° 30' 48" E.

N. N. E. about 2 miles from Greig reef, a coral patch of about 1 cable in diameter with 5 or 6 fathoms on it, and 13 or 14 fathoms around is lying with the bearings:—

Panambangan South peak ... S. 62° 57' E.
 Karimata High peak ... S. 26° 37' E.
 or in: lat. 0° 52' 20" S.

FIRST MATES' CERTIFICATES OF COMPETENCY.

THE accompanying notification by the Victoria Steam Navigation Board is published for general information.

JAMES H. GRAVES,
 Commissioner of Trade and Customs.
 Department of Trade and Customs,
 Melbourne, 26th July 1882.

VICTORIA.

NOTICE TO CANDIDATES FOR EXAMINATION FOR FIRST MATES' CERTIFICATES OF COMPETENCY.

Service as Third and Fourth Mate.

THE Victoria Steam Navigation Board have had their attention called to the position of young officers serving as third and fourth mates in the ships of the "Peninsular and Oriental" and other large companies, who under present regulations cannot be examined for certificates of competency as first mate until they have served twelve months at sea in the capacity of second mate or some higher rank. The Board have therefore decided to accept such service as third or fourth mate to the same extent as second mate's service is accepted to qualify candidates for examination for certificates of competency as first mate. Before, however, a candidate can be allowed to be examined, he must produce satisfactory proofs that he has had charge of a watch for not less than twelve months while serving as such third or fourth mate, and that during the whole of that time he has been in possession of a second mate's certificate of competency.

ROBERT FOLLARTON, Chairman.
 Offices of the Steam Navigation Board,

INCORRECT CHARTS.

THE following Notice, issued by the Victoria Steam Navigation Board, is published for general information.

JAMES H. GRAVES,
Commissioner of Trade and Customs.
Department of Trade and Customs,
Melbourne, 26th July 1882.

NOTICE TO SHIPOWNERS, MASTERS OF VESSELS, AND AGENTS.
THE attention of the Victoria Steam Navigation Board has frequently been called to cases in which British vessels have been endangered or wrecked through masters attempting to navigate them by means of antiquated or otherwise defective charts.

The Board desire, therefore, to direct the special attention of shipowners, masters of vessels, and agents, to the necessity of seeing that the charts taken or sent on board their ships are corrected down to the time of sailing.

Neglect to supply a ship with proper charts will, in future, be brought prominently before the court of enquiry, in the event of a wreck or casualty occurring from that cause.

REGULATION UNDER "THE DISEASES IN STOCK ACT 1872."

At the Executive Council Chamber, Melbourne, the thirty-first day of July 1882.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Governor.

Sir Bryan O'Loughlin, Bart. | Mr. Bolton
Mr. Grant | Mr. MacBain.
Mr. Graves

WHEREAS by The Diseases in Stock Act 1872 among other things the Governor in Council is empowered from time to time to make orders and regulations for the purposes therein mentioned and to rescind the same: Now therefore His Excellency the Governor, by and with the advice of the Executive Council, doth hereby rescind No. 17 of the regulations dated the nineteenth day of March One thousand eight hundred and eighty, and doth make the following regulation in lieu thereof, that is to say:—

REGULATION.

17. Sheep introduced from neighbouring colonies.—Every sheep introduced by sea into the colony from any place in any of the Australasian colonies or New Zealand, except Kings Island, shall, immediately on being landed, be removed to some quarantine ground determined by the Governor in Council, or to some store or place in the city of Melbourne, of which the Chief Inspector of Stock may, by writing under his hand, approve for that purpose, and which shall be deemed a quarantine ground, and shall be detained there for not less than ten (10) days, and until the Chief Inspector shall, by writing under his hand, authorize its removal; and every such sheep shall, whilst so detained, be dipped not less than twice at intervals of from eight (8) to ten (10) days, the first of such dippings to take place at a time to be directed by the Chief Inspector, and in the medicaments provided by the regulations under The Scab Act 1870, No. 370, under the direction and to the satisfaction of the Chief Inspector of Stock.

And the Honorable Charles Young, Her Majesty's Minister of Agriculture for Victoria, shall give the necessary directions herein accordingly.

ROB. WADSWORTH,
Clerk of the Executive Council.

DISTRICT WHERE PUBLICANS' LICENSES MAY BE SPECIALLY GRANTED.

PROCLAMATION

By His Excellency The Most Honorable George Augustus Constantine, Marquis of Normanby, Earl of Mulgrave, Viscount Normanby, and Baron Mulgrave of Mulgrave, all in the County of York, in the Peerage of the United Kingdom; and Baron Mulgrave of New Ross, in the County of Wexford, in the Peerage of Ireland; a Member of Her Majesty's Most Honorable Privy Council; Knight Grand Cross of the Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George; Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over the Colony of Victoria and its Dependencies, &c., &c., &c.

WHEREAS by The Licensing Act 1876 (No. 566, section 44) it was amongst other things enacted that, notwithstanding the provisions thereinbefore contained, it should be lawful for the Governor in Council from time to time to proclaim any place or district a place or district where, owing to a sudden increase of population or otherwise, the necessity for the immediate grant of publicans' licenses exists, to be a place or district wherein publicans' licenses might be specially granted, and from time to time to revoke any such proclamation: Now therefore I, the Governor of Victoria, with the advice of the Executive Council, do hereby proclaim to be a district where publicans' licenses may be specially granted under the provisions of the 44th section of the said Act.

Given under my Hand and the Seal of the Colony, at Melbourne, this thirty-first day of July, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, and in the forty-sixth year of Her Majesty's reign.

ROAD PROCLAIMED UNDER "THE LAND ACT 1869."

PROCLAMATION

By His Excellency The Most Honorable George Augustus Constantine, Marquis of Normanby, Earl of Mulgrave, Viscount Normanby, and Baron Mulgrave of Mulgrave, all in the County of York, in the Peerage of the United Kingdom; and Baron Mulgrave of New Ross, in the County of Wexford, in the Peerage of Ireland; a Member of Her Majesty's Most Honorable Privy Council; Knight Grand Cross of the Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George; Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over the Colony of Victoria and its Dependencies, &c., &c., &c.

WHEREAS by the The Land Act 1869 it was amongst other things enacted, that the Governor might from time to time by a notice in the Government Gazette proclaim as a street or road or as a town or village any portion or portions of Crown lands, and the lands in such town or village should be sold by auction in the manner therein provided for the sale of Crown lands by public auction, and the lands upon which such street or road should have been proclaimed should be and be deemed to be thenceforward dedicated to the public: Now therefore I, the Governor of Victoria, with the advice of the Executive Council, do by this notice proclaim as a road the portion of Crown land hereinafter described, that is to say:—

ROAD IN THE PARISH OF TAMBO.—One acre twenty-five perches, county of Dargo, parish of Tambo: Commencing at a point bearing east two chains forty links from the south-east angle of allotment 48c; bounded thence by a line bearing east three chains thirty-three links; thence by allotment 47A bearing S. 72° 32' W. thirteen chains twenty-nine links; and thence by lines bearing respectively north one chain five links and N. 72° 32' E. nine chains eighty links to the point of commencement.—(T.66(1) (82.B.32595).

Given under my Hand and the Seal of the Colony, at Melbourne, this thirty-first day of July, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, and in the forty-sixth year of Her Majesty's reign.
NORMANBY.

By His Excellency's Command,
W. MADDEN,
Commissioner of Crown Lands and Survey.
GOD SAVE THE QUEEN!

COMMONS DIMINISHED.

PROCLAMATION

By His Excellency the Most Honorable George Augustus Constantine, Marquis of Normanby, Earl of Mulgrave, Viscount Normanby, and Baron Mulgrave of Mulgrave, all in the County of York, in the Peerage of the United Kingdom; and Baron Mulgrave of New Ross, in the County of Wexford, in the Peerage of Ireland; a Member of Her Majesty's Most Honorable Privy Council; Knight Grand Cross of the Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George; Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over the Colony of Victoria and its Dependencies, &c., &c., &c.

WHEREAS by The Land Act 1869 it was amongst other things enacted, that it should be lawful for the Governor at any time and from time to time under regulations to be made for such purpose to proclaim any Crown lands as a common, and at any time to alter, add to, diminish, revoke, or abolish such common, or unite one or more commons; and it was also enacted that the Governor might from time to time increase, and after one month's notice in the Government Gazette diminish, alter, or abolish any common heretofore or hereafter to be proclaimed or re-proclaimed, and might from time to time re-proclaim the whole or any part of any such common for any of the purposes and subject to the provisions of the said Act; and it was also directed that notice of any proposed proclamation, alteration, addition, diminution, revocation, or union of commons should be published and all objections thereto should be heard in the manner set forth in the One hundredth section of the said Act: And whereas due notice has been given of the intention to diminish the commons hereinafter mentioned: Now therefore I, the Governor of Victoria, with the advice of the Executive Council, do hereby diminish the Commons hereinafter mentioned, in accordance with the provisions of the above-recited Act, that is to say:—

THE DURHAM, SCOTCHMAN'S, NAPOLEON, WHIM HOLES, AND BLACK LEADS GOLDFIELDS COMMON, proclaimed by Order of 22nd April 1861, and increased by Orders dated respectively 26th November 1866 and 21st December 1875, is hereby diminished by deducting therefrom the portion comprised within the boundaries hereinafter described, viz.:- Twelve acres two roods six perches, parish of Yarrowee: Commencing at the north-east angle of allotment 3 of section 6; thence westerly by that allotment and allotment 4, northerly by allotment 12 and allotment 16 of section 4, and westerly by allotment 15 and a road to the road from Ballaarat to Cambrian Hill; and thence southerly by that road to the point of commencement.—(80.1001/47.)

THE KEILOR TOWN COMMON, described in a Proclamation bearing date the 7th December 1868, is hereby diminished by deducting therefrom three roods, more or less, of land, being the portion lying between allotment 26 of section A, town of Keilor, and the Saltwater River.

Given under my Hand and the Seal of the Colony, at Melbourne, this thirty-first day of July, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, and in the forty-sixth year of Her Majesty's reign.
NORMANBY.

NORTH CEMETERY, PORTLAND.

At the Executive Council Chamber, Melbourne, the thirty-first day of July, 1882.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Governor.

Sir Bryan O'Loughlin, Bart.	Mr. Bolton
Mr. Grant	Mr. MacBain.
Mr. Graves

WHEREAS by a Statute of the Parliament of Victoria No. 310, intitled, An Act to amend the Laws relating to or affecting the Public Health, it was enacted, that in case it should appear to the Governor in Council that burials in any cemetery, under any law relating to public cemeteries, or in any other burial-ground or place of burial whatsoever, should be wholly discontinued, or should be discontinued subject to any exception or qualification, the Governor in Council might, by an Order to be published in the Government Gazette, direct that after a time to be mentioned in such Order, not being less than three months from the date thereof, burials in such cemetery, or burial-ground, or place of burial, should be discontinued wholly, or subject to any exceptions or qualifications mentioned in the same, or in any subsequent order, and might from time to time postpone the time mentioned in such Order for the discontinuance of burials, or otherwise vary any such Order, whether the time appointed for the discontinuance of burials thereunder, or other operation of such Order, should or should not have arrived: And whereas it appears to the Governor in Council expedient that burials in the burial-ground or place of burial known as "The North Cemetery," Portland, should be discontinued: Now therefore His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, doth by this present Order direct that all burials in the said burial-ground, or place of burial, known as "The North Cemetery," at Portland aforesaid, shall, after a period of three months from the date of this Order, be discontinued, excepting in the case of owners of graves in the said cemetery.

An the Honorable Walter Madden, Her Majesty's Commissioner of Crown Lands and Survey for Victoria, shall give the necessary directions herein accordingly.

ROB. WADSWORTH,
Clerk of the Executive Council.

MURDER NEAR DREP LEAD, VICTORIA.
NOTICE.

ON the 17th January 1882 the headless body of a man was found near the Deep Lead Railway Station, Stawell, Victoria, and at an inquest held, subsequently, it was shown that the man had been wilfully murdered. The remains are believed to be those of one Charles Forbes, or Forbys, who worked on the Dimboola line of railway during the months of October, November, and December 1881, with a man named Robert Francis Burns. The said Robert Francis Burns has since been arrested, and committed for trial at the Central Criminal Court, to be held at Melbourne on the 15th day of August 1882, for the murder of Charles Forbes, or Forbys; but as the prisoner alleges that Forbes is still alive, it is requested that the said Charles Forbes, or Forbys, if living, or any person acquainted with him, or able to give information about him since the date of his disappearance, should at once communicate with the Chief Commissioner of Police, Melbourne. Description of the missing man Charles Forbes is as follows:—About 40 years of age, 5 feet 10<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> or 11 inches high, 14 stone weight, full sandy beard, and hair a shade darker. Supposed to be a native of the north of Ireland.

J. M. GRANT,
Chief Secretary.

Chief Secretary's Office,
Melbourne, May 1882.

SHIRE OF KORONG.

BYE-LAWS.—No. I.

A Bye-law of the Shire of Korong, made under section 213 of the "Local Government Act 1874," and numbered I., for regulating the proceedings and business of the Council.

IN pursuance of the powers conferred by the "Local Government Act 1874," the President, and Councillors, and Ratepayers of the Shire of Korong order as follows:—

1. General conduct of business.—In all cases not herein provided for resort shall be had to the rules, forms, and usages of Parliament, which shall be followed so far as the same are applicable to the proceedings of the council.

2. Minutes of meeting to be read at next subsequent meeting.—At every meeting of the council the first business thereof shall be the reading and putting a question for the confirmation of the minutes of the proceedings at the preceding meeting, and no discussion shall be permitted thereon except as to their accuracy as a record of the proceedings; and the said minutes of the proceedings at the preceding meeting shall then be signed as by this Act required.

3. Order of business at meetings.—After the signing of the minutes as aforesaid the order of business of an ordinary meeting shall be as follow, or as near thereto as may be practicable, but for the greater convenience of the council at any particular meeting thereof it may be altered by resolution to that effect:—

- I. Reading letters received, and considering and ordering thereon.
- II. Reception and reading of petitions and memorials.
- III. Reports of officers, and ordering thereon.
- IV. Receiving deputations.
- V. Tenders.
- VI. Orders of the day, including motions of which notice has been given, subjects continued from proceedings of former meetings, and business arising out of reports or other documents before the council.
- VII. Instructions to officers.
- VIII. Notices of motion.
- IX. Accounts for payment.

And the order of business at a special meeting shall be the order in which such business stands in the notice thereof.

4. Divisions.—Whenever a division shall be demanded by any councillor the councillors voting in the affirmative shall first hold up their hands, and then those voting in the negative shall hold up their hands, and the result be declared by the chairman.

5. Motions.—All notices of motion shall be dated, signed, and given by the intending mover to the secretary, at the close of the meeting of council; or, if not required by law to be given at a meeting, then they shall be delivered, or sent to the secretary, at least four clear days before the meeting at which they are to be proposed; and such notices shall be numbered and considered in the order in which they are received.

6. Notice of motion to be given.—No member shall make any motion initiating a subject for discussion but in pursuance of notice given, as prescribed in the last preceding clause, except with the consent of all the councillors present.

7. Motion to be proceeded with by councillor giving same, except with consent.—No motion shall be proceeded with in the absence of the councillor who gave notice of the same, unless by some other councillor producing written authority from him to that effect.

8. Order, &c., of debate.—Any councillor desirous of making a motion or amendment, or taking part in discussion thereon shall rise and address the chairman, and shall not be interrupted unless called to order, when he shall sit down until the councillor calling to order shall have been heard thereon, and the question of order disposed of, when the councillor in possession of the chair may proceed with the subject.

9. Nature of motion to be stated.—Any councillor desirous of proposing an original motion or amendment must state the nature of the same before he addresses the council thereon.

10. Motion not to be withdrawn without leave.—No motion or amendment shall be withdrawn without the leave of the council.

11. Motion to be seconded.—No motion or amendment shall be discussed or put to the vote of the council unless it be seconded; but a councillor may, however, require the enforcement of any standing order of the council by directing the chairman's attention to the infraction thereof.

12. One amendment only shall be discussed at one time; but, if lost, another amendment may be moved on the original motion. If an amendment be carried the motion so amended shall become an original motion, and one amendment may be moved on it, but not more. The chairman shall put the amendment first, and if that be lost shall then put the original motion.

13. Mover of motion.—A councillor moving a motion shall be held to have spoken thereon, but a councillor merely seconding a motion shall not be held to have spoken upon it.

14. Designation of councillors.—The councillors in meeting of council shall designate each other by their official titles, namely, that of president, chairman, or councillor, as the case may require.

15. Priority of councillors.—If two or more councillors rise to speak at the same time the chairman shall decide which is entitled to priority.

16. Chairman to rise in addressing council.—The chairman shall rise in addressing the council to discuss any question, and shall not leave the chair on such occasions.

17. Councillor not to speak second time on same question.—No councillor shall speak a second time on the same question, unless entitled to reply, or in explanation when he has been misrepresented or misunderstood, and then only by permission of the chairman.

18. Points of order.—The chairman, when called upon to decide on points of order or practice, shall state the provision, rule, or practice which he deems applicable to the case, without discussing or commenting on the same, and his decision as to order or explanation in each case shall be final.

19. Councillors not to digress, &c.—No councillor shall digress from the subject matter of the question under discussion, or comment upon the words used by any other councillor in a previous debate; and all imputations of improper motives, and all personal reflections on councillors, shall be deemed highly disorderly.

20. Councillors to apologise for disorderly, &c., expression.—Whenever any councillor shall make use of any expression, disorderly, or capable of being applied offensively to any other councillor, the councillor so offending shall be required by the chairman to withdraw the expression and make a satisfactory apology to the council.

21. Councillor called to order to sit down.—A councillor called to order shall sit down, unless permitted to explain.

22. Councillor twice offending guilty of an offence.—Any councillor using offensive or disorderly language, and having been twice called to order, or to withdraw and to apologise for such conduct, and refusing to do so, shall be guilty of an offence.

23. Strangers.—Any person, not being a councillor, who shall, having been admitted to any meeting of the council, be guilty thereof of any improper or disorderly conduct, or who shall not leave when requested by the chairman to do so, may be forthwith removed, and shall be deemed guilty of an offence.

24. Councillor not attending order for call.—A call of the whole council may be ordered for the consideration of any business, and any councillor not attending in compliance with such order, without reasonable excuse to the satisfaction of the majority of the council, shall be guilty of an offence.

25. Councillor may demand documents.—Any councillor may of right demand the production of any of the documents of the council applying to the question under discussion.

26. Voting.—The council shall vote by show of hands, and any councillor present and not voting, not being disabled by law from so doing, shall be guilty of an offence.

27. Question how declared.—The chairman shall, in taking the sense of the council, put the question first in the affirmative, then in the negative; and the result thereof shall be recorded in the minutes.

28. Motions, &c., to be in writing.—At every meeting of the council all motions, whether original motions or amendments, shall be reduced into writing, signed by the mover, and delivered to the chairman immediately on their being moved and seconded.

29. Mover of motion to have right of reply.—The mover of every original proposition, but not of any amendment, shall have a right to reply, immediately after which the question shall be put from the chair.

30. Motion for adjournment.—No discussion shall be allowed on any motion for adjournment of the council, but if, on the question being put, the motion being negatived, the subject then under consideration or the next on the notice paper shall be discussed, or any other that may be allowed precedence, before any subsequent motion for adjournment be made.

31. Protests.—Any councillor may protest against any resolution of the council, and such protest shall in every case be given in writing forthwith on the adoption of the resolution protested against; and the protest shall specify the reasons for protesting, and shall be entered in the minutes of the meeting at which the protest shall have been made, unless it be declared by a majority of the council to be not in accordance with truth, or in its terms disrespectful to the council.

32. Deputations.—Deputations of ratepayers must be introduced by one of the councillors representing the riding from which they come.

33. Petitions to be respectful.—It shall be incumbent on every councillor presenting a petition to acquaint himself with the contents thereof, and to ascertain that it does not contain language disrespectful to the council, and that the contents do not violate any bye-law or any provision hereof.

34. Councillors to affix their names.—Every councillor presenting a petition to the council shall write his name at the beginning thereof.

35. Petitions to be in writing.—Every petition shall be in writing, and not printed or lithographed, and shall contain the names of the petitioners at the end thereof, and be signed by at least one person on every sheet on which it is written.

36. To be signed by petitioners.—Every petition shall be signed by the persons whose names are appended thereto by their names or marks, and by no one else, except in cases of incapacity by sickness.

37. Councillors confined to statement of certain facts.—Every councillor presenting a petition to the council shall confine himself to a statement of the persons from whom it comes, of the number of signatures attached to it, of the material allegations contained in it, and to the reading of the prayer thereof.

38. Appointment, &c., of officers.—No appointment to any permanent office at the disposal of the council shall take place until seven clear days' public notice shall have been given, by advertisement in one or more newspapers circulating in the shire, inviting applications from qualified candidates for the same.

39. Salaries of officers, &c.—The salary or allowance attached to all offices and places at the disposal of the council shall in all cases be fixed before they proceed to appoint any person to fill the same, before the advertisement inviting applications as aforesaid, and shall be specified in such advertisement.

40. Unless in cases of emergency no sum exceeding the amount of ten pounds shall be expended by the council except on notice of motion duly given. In urgent cases a sum not exceeding five pounds may be expended by a councillor or the engineer.

41. The treasurer may make progress payments on contracts on the certificate of the engineer between the meetings of the council, and shall submit to the council at every meeting a complete statement of all receipts and expenditure since the previous meeting, together with a statement of the bank balance and cash in hand.

42. Suspension of rules.—Any one or more of these rules or regulations may be suspended for a special purpose on motion upon notice duly given, and shall not otherwise be suspended except by a unanimous vote of the council.

43. Penalty.—If any person shall be guilty of any wilful offence or misfeasance or wilful or negligent act of commission or omission contrary to any provision contained in this bye-law, he shall forfeit a sum not exceeding Five pounds.

Passed by the Council of the Shire of Korong on the twentieth day of June 1882.

preservers, apply to be registered as proprietors of the following trade-marks, numbered 1 and 2.
 The trade-marks are described as follows, that is to say:—

No. 1 consists of the device of a heart surrounded by two concentric oval lines, forming a border, in which it is intended to print the name of the article to which such trade-mark is applied.
 Beneath the heart is a complete and an incomplete circle, the remaining portion of the latter being behind the former, as shown in the margin.

No. 2 consists of a label bearing the representation of a crown, above which are the words "Golden Crown," and below it is the word "Brand," all printed in gold color, as shown in the margin.

We desire that the said trade-marks may each be registered in respect of the descriptions of goods following contained in Class 42, that is to say, in respect of Jams, Pickles, Sauces, Preserves, and other Oilmen's Stores.
