The salary set down opposite each name should be that which was legally payable on the 31st December 1886; but the claims under Act 160, the former Regulations, the interpretations adopted by Departments, and the arrangements sanctioned by Parliament are so varied, that the Public Service Board thinks it probable that errors remain in spite of careful revision by the accountants of the several Departments.

Every officer occupying for the purpose of residence any building belonging to the Government is charged a fair and reasonable sum as rent, which sum is deducted from his salary. Provided always that, in the case of any officer who was so occupying any such building at the time of the passing of the Act, no such deduction is allowed to bring his net income below that which he drew on 31st December 1884.
