No. 26.—FEBRUARY 19, 1915.—2247.

Handwritten text, mostly illegible due to extreme fading and bleed-through from the reverse side of the page. The text appears to be organized into several paragraphs, with some lines being more distinct than others. The handwriting is cursive and somewhat slanted. There are some faint, larger words that might be identifiable, such as "The" and "and", but the majority of the text is too light to transcribe accurately. The page is otherwise blank, with no visible margins or other markings.
