FIRST SCHEDULE.

DANGERS OF BENZENE (BENZOL).

Benzene boils at 80° C. It is highly inflammable. Its vapour is also highly inflammable and explodes if mixed with the proper proportions of air. It should not be confused with benzine, a petroleum product, which though its vapour is explosive when mixed with air is not nearly so harmful to health. Mixtures of air and benzene containing from 1.4 to 6.8 per cent. of benzene are explosive.

Air containing very much lower proportions of benzene, while not explosive, is, if inhaled, very harmful to health.

Exposure during a more or less protracted period to concentrations as low as 50 parts per million in the air will cause damage.

N.B.—If you can smell the benzene it is harmful for prolonged exposure.

Benzene poisoning is usually caused by the inhalation of the vapour. Absorption through the skin may also cause poisoning.

Benzene poisoning may be acute or chronic.

Acute poisoning is usually due to the inhalation of high concentrations of vapour during a short time, particularly where there is exposure to benzene vapour in an enclosed space. The exposed person may become dizzy and excited and, if not rapidly removed, may become unconscious and die.

Chronic poisoning.—This is the most usual type in industry, and is due to the frequent inhalation of air containing low concentrations of benzene. It may take months or years to develop. It has a marked effect on the blood, the blood-forming organs being impaired or destroyed and the resistance to infection greatly impaired. Young persons and females are more readily affected. The person's health may gradually become poorer and poorer, and fatal cases have occurred without benzene being suspected as the cause. Complaints such as failing energy, dizziness, nausea, lack of appetite, headache, sleepiness and such signs as drowsiness, tendency to bleeding, nose bleeds, vomiting, nervousness or undue pallor should be investigated at once by a doctor. There may be serious damage to the blood and blood-forming organs without any noticeable symptoms such as the above, although some of these will eventually develop. Further, serious damage may not show itself until some months after the person has left the work in which he was exposed to benzene.

Treatment.—Acute benzene poisoning: Remove patient from exposure. Keep him warm. If breathing is weak or suspended, apply artificial respiration at once. Send for a doctor. Chronic poisoning: Treatment should be left entirely to the doctor.

Preventive Methods.

Acute poisoning.—No person should enter any tank or receptacle which contains or has contained benzene or other tar products unless the tank or receptacle has been properly cleaned out, and then only if the person is wearing a mask to which a pure air supply is delivered and a safety belt with a rope attached. Another employee should be stationed outside in readiness for any emergency, and an employee trained in giving artificial respiration should be in constant attendance. Benzene should not be used in a confined space without ventilation.

Chronic poisoning.—The best preventive is to use some other substance. The next best, if the above is not practicable, is to keep the concentration of benzene vapour in the air as low as possible. Under the Amending Harmful Gases, Vapours, Fumes, Mists, Smokes and Dusts Regulations 1949, the permissible limit is 30 parts per million of air.

SECOND SCHEDULE.

DANGERS OF BENZENE (BENZOL).

Inhalation of high concentrations of benzene vapour for a short time may be fatal.

Inhalation of low concentrations for prolonged periods may cause serious illness and may even be fatal.

N.B.—If you can smell the benzene it is harmful to health for prolonged exposure.

VARIATION OF SPECIFICATION FOR SCHEME OF PRIVATE STREET CONSTRUCTION, CITY OF OAKLEIGH.

IN pursuance of the provisions of the Local Government (Private Street Construction) Act 1947, as amended by the Local Government Act 1949, His Excellency the Governor of the State of Victoria, being satisfied that, owing to shortages in supplies of materials, the works provided for in the scheme adopted by the Council of the City of Oakleigh for the construction of Dermot, Delos, and Dalgan streets, and portion of Golf-road, being private streets within the municipal district of the said city, cannot be satisfactorily executed in accordance with the specifications, maps, plans, sections, and elevations in the scheme, doth by this Order, by and with the advice of the Executive Council of the said State, authorize the Council of the City of Oakleigh to execute the works with the following variations of the said specifications, viz.:—

For the clauses contained in the specifications headed "Metal, Screenings, and Toppings" and "Metalling," there shall be substituted—

"Fine Crushed Stone Base Course."

Description.

O

The base course shall consist of finely broken stone filled, if necessary, with an approved gritty binder, and spread and consolidated on the prepared sub-grade in one or more uniform layers as specified herein, to a total thickness of four (4) inches after completion of consolidation. No single course shall have a thickness when consolidated greater than five (5) inches or less than three (3) inches, but each course may be built up of layers of lesser thickness if consolidation is effected by grading.

Broken Stone and Binder.

Broken stone shall be crushed from clean, tough, durable stone, having a French co-efficient of wear not less than eight (8). It shall be free from flat or elongated pieces, and from any foreign substance. Where the run of crusher is deficient in fine binding material, binder consisting of gritty cementitious material shall be added.

The surface course material as consolidated shall conform to the following grading:—

Total passing 1 in. square opening laboratory sieve
—100 per cent.

Total passing 3/16 in. square opening laboratory sieve
—40-60 per cent.

Total passing 1/16 in. square opening laboratory sieve
—25-35 per cent.

Cementing material determined by standard method of decantation—10-20 per cent.

The consolidation value of the materials, after addition of binder, if necessary, shall be not less than one hundred (100) lb. per square inch, when tested by the method given hereafter.

Binder, if required, shall be mixed by blending at the crushing plant or by adding after spreading. Both methods shall not be used at the same time.

All broken stone, and added binder, if any, shall conform to the approved samples lodged with the accepted tender.

Spreading.

The material shall be spread to the required loose thickness in a uniform layer on the sub-grade by shovelling from dumping boards, shovelling or grading from continuous stacks upon the roadway, or by tipping directly from approved vehicles capable of depositing the material in a uniform thin layer.

If binder is added after spreading, it shall be spread uniformly on the coarse material and the whole mixed thoroughly by blading the material from side to side in a windrow. When the binder is uniformly distributed throughout the surfacing, the mixture shall be carefully spread to the proper widths. In blading, care shall be taken to avoid injury to the sub-grade or base course. Any damage of this nature shall be made good by the contractor at his own expense.

Materials shall be spread without segregation of large or fine particles. Segregated materials shall be remixed by harrowing and blading.

Construction shall commence at the point nearest the source of the materials and proceed continuously away from this point."

And the Honorable Percy Thomas Byrnes, His Majesty's Commissioner of Public Works for the State of Victoria, shall give the necessary directions herein accordingly.

Clerk of the Executive Council.
