Poisoning by Organic Phosphorous Pesticides.

Materials.

Organic tetra- and pyro-phosphates (marketed under such trade names as Hexone, H.E.T.P., Demite, Tetraphos, Tephos) and organic thiophosphates (marketed as E605, Paraphos, Phosfone Parathion). While all these materials are highly toxic, the thiophosphates appear to be the most troublesome.

Symptoms.

Poisoning can occur by inhalation, by ingestion or by absorption through the skin. Evidence of poisoning has occurred after handling or packing the concentrated materials, after spraying with diluted solutions and dusts, and after handling recently sprayed fruit.

Symptoms are giddiness, headache, tightness of the chest, blurred vision, pin-point pupils, sweating, nausea, vomiting, diarrhoea, abdominal cramps, convulsions, semi-coma and coma. Greatly increased salivary and bronchial secretion is common, simulating severe pulmonary edema.

Treatment.

Give relatively large doses of atropine (1/60-1/130 gr.) preferably subcutaneously, at once and every hour as required up to a total of 3/10 gr. or until pupils dilate. The patient should be watched carefully for a 24 or 48 hour period during which it may be necessary to give additional atropine to maintain a balance between its effects and the toxic effects of the poison. It is the consensus of medical opinion in America that the administration of atropine should be courageously continued when the patient remains in a definitely toxic condition due to muscarinic action of the poison.

Postural drainage and aspiration may be necessary if signs of pulmonary congestion are present. The administration of oxygen may be required. Do not use morphine.

Use of Pesticides Regulations 1953.

THIRD SCHEDULE.

Signs and symptoms of poisoning by substances set out in First Schedule.

Poisoning can occur through inhalation, by ingestion or by absorption through the skin.

Symptoms are giddiness, headache, tightness in chest, blurred vision, pin-point pupils, sweating, nausea, vomiting, diarrhoea, abdominal cramps, convulsions, semi-coma and coma. Greatly increased salivary and bronchial secretion are common.

Persons already suffering from headache, or a "cold" or bronchitis, or gastric upset should not engage in spraying operations with these substances since the symptoms of these conditions may mask the early symptoms of poisoning by these substances, or render the effects of them more severe.

Exercise extreme care in handling or using. Do not allow contact with the skin. If accidentally spilled on skin, immediately wash thoroughly with soap and water.

Do not breathe vapour, spray, mist or dust. Wear protective waterproof clothing, rubber gloves and face mask when making up spray liquid or spraying, and when handling or using dust.

The face mask should be of the chemical cartridge type with canister of charcoal and filter pad. Wash clothing and gloves daily. Wash hands, arms and face thoroughly with soap and water before eating or smoking. Do not eat or smoke during spraying or dusting. Wash out and destroy empty containers.

ANTIDOTE.—Secure on a doctor's prescription an emergency supply of six atropine tablets (1/100 grain) for each person, and keep them handy on the job. The early symptoms may be nausea, headache, giddiness, blurred vision, contraction of the pupils of the eyes, vomiting. On the first appearance of any of these symptoms, immediately cease work and call a doctor. While awaiting him take one atropine tablet each quarter hour for one hour and then one every half hour for another hour.

To comply with Food and Drug Regulations and to protect pickers, do not spray within three weeks of harvesting.

IMPORTANT.—Repeated mild effects may be very dangerous. If affected at all avoid further contact until medical approval has been given.
