Historic Shipwrecks Act 1981
PROTECTION OF HISTORIC SHIPWRECKS AND RELICS

In pursuance of section 10 of the Historic Shipwrecks Act 1981, I, Thomas William Roper, Her Majesty's Minister for Planning and Environment for the State of Victoria, being of the opinion that the article or articles described hereunder appearing to be the remains of a ship that is or are situated in Victorian waters may be of historic significance, do by this notice, declare the article or articles to be an historic shipwreck.

Description

The wreck, relics and remains of the 2200-ton wooden ship, Empress of the Sea (1853-1861), which sank in Nepean Bay after being set alight by an arsonist.

The vessel was loaded with an outward cargo of primary produce from the young colony of Victoria, including wool, wheat, whalebone, tallow, flour, sheepskins, copper ore and gold as well as passengers. All of the gold and some other cargo was recovered.

The remains are of archaeological and historical significance as a potential source of information relating to early primary production, trade, shipboard technology and shipboard life. The vessel itself was one of the largest wooden sailing ships lost in Port Phillip and had been a beautiful example of a "clipper" ship built by Donald McKay of Boston, Massachusetts and owned by James Baines Black Ball Line. The Empress of the Sea shipwreck site is of very high significance in regional, national and international heritage terms.
