Occupational Health and Safety
(Noise) Regulations 1991

In accordance with the provisions of the Subordinate Legislation Act 1962, notice is given of the proposal to make the above regulations.

A Regulatory Impact Statement has been prepared as required by the Subordinate Legislation Act 1962 and written comments on the Statement are now invited.

The proposed regulations will replace the existing Health (Hearing Conservation) Regulations 1978. The existing regulations are considered to provide insufficient protection against occupational deafness.

Major features of the proposed regulation include: lowering the noise exposure levels permissible in workplaces; provision of an implementation period which results in a requirement for employers to comply with the entire regulation by 1 July 1997; where noise exposure levels are likely to be exceeded in a workplace then a noise survey must be conducted to determine whether the noise exposure levels are actually being exceeded; to reduce noise exposure employers are required to implement engineering controls, administrative controls (changing the way a job is done, etc) and personal hearing protection controls in that descending order of priority; and when personal hearing protection devices are needed to reduce exposure then the employer will be required to implement an audiometric program.

The Regulatory Impact Statement notes that the incidence of occupational deafness in Victoria is just over 2000 reported cases each year. This places excessive noise at work in the category of a key industrial health hazard. The Statement concludes that adoption of the proposed regulation would result in a significant cost benefit to the community.

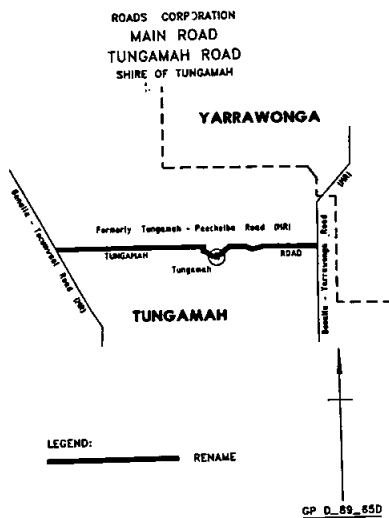

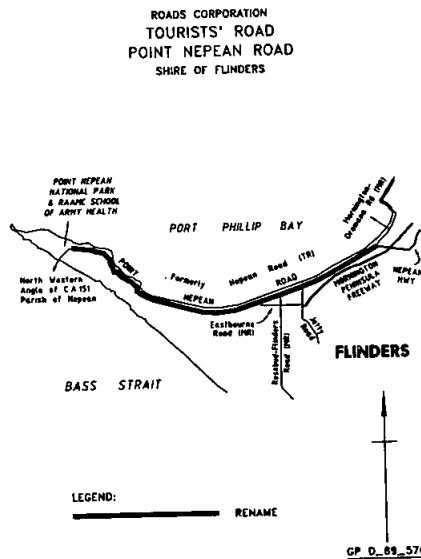

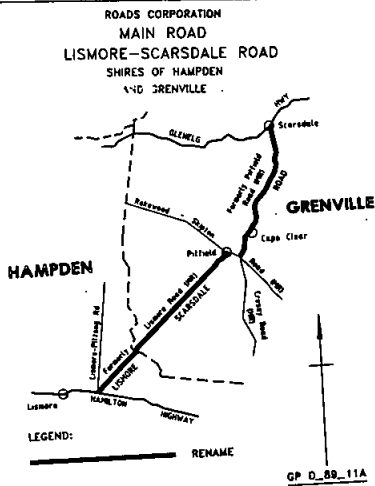

Copies of the Regulatory Impact Statement may be obtained by writing to: Mike Jenkins, Policy Officer, Standards Development Program, Occupational Health and Safety Authority, Level 10, Nauru House, 80 Collins Street, Melbourne 3000 or telephone (03) 655 6343.

Written submissions should be sent to the above no later than 28 days from the date of publication of this advertisement.
