NOTES

1. Terms relating to Contents

Lethal contents—containing poisonous or radioactive substances which, under the expected concentration and operating conditions, is capable, on leakage, of producing death or serious irreversible harm to persons from a single short-term exposure to a very small amount of the substance by inhalation or contact, even when prompt restorative measures are taken. Examples of such substances are hydrogen cyanide, carbonyl chloride and highly radioactive substances (NOH&SC Exposure Standards for atmospheric contaminants in the occupational environment or other relevant exposure Standard usually <1 ppm).

Very harmful contents—containing a substance which under expected concentration and operating conditions is classified as flammable, poisonous, oxidizing, explosive, highly reactive substances, or harmful to human tissue, but excluding lethal contents.

Harmful contents—containing a substance which under the expected concentration and operating conditions is classified as combustible liquids or fluid irritants to humans or harmful to the environment, but excluding lethal or very harmful.

Non-harmful contents—containing substances which are not covered by lethal, very harmful or harmful.

NOTE: The expected concentrations referenced above are for the contents of the vessel at the time of rupture.

2. Terms relating to Substances

Substance—includes gas, liquid, solid or mixture.

Harmful to human tissue—describes a substance which is capable of harming the skin, eyes or exposed mucous membrane so that irreversible damage may be done unless prompt restorative measures are taken, including flushing with water, use of antidotes or medicines. It includes oxidising, radioactive and corrosive fluids and other liquids at temperatures above 90°C or below -30°C.

Flammable gas—dangerous goods of Class 2.1 of the ADG Code; i.e. a gas capable of being ignited and burned in air at atmospheric pressure.

Gas—dangerous goods of Class 2 of the ADG Code, including liquefied gas and dissolved gas. Liquids (e.g. water) above their atmospheric boiling point are taken as equivalent to gas.

Oxidising substance—dangerous goods of Class 5 of the ADG Code.

Poisonous (or toxic) substance—dangerous goods of Class 2.3 or 6 of the ADG Code, e.g. chlorine or anhydrous ammonia or infectious substance.

Radioactive substance—dangerous goods of Class 7 of the ADG Code.

Corrosive substance—dangerous goods of Class 8 of the ADG Code.

NOTE: Where a substance meets more than one of the above descriptions it shall be treated as that resulting in the most severe requirement.

3. Volume to be used in pV calculations—The volume (V) to be used in calculating pV values shall be net internal volume in litres as follows:

- (a) General vessels—use volume of vessel, i.e. volume which can be filled with fluid under pressure.
- (b) Multichamber vessels—
 - (i) chambers normally open to each other, treat as one vessel, i.e. use total volume; or
 - (ii) chambers normally isolated, treat as separate vessels.
- (c) Vessel containing fluid in two phases (e.g. gas and liquid): assume vessel full of gas if liquid is above its atmospheric pressure boiling point, other wise select greater hazard based on maximum volume of liquid or gas.
- (d) Open vessel with jacket, use volume of jacket.
- (e) Coil type heater, use volume of coil.

4. Modifications to values of pV or pD for special conditions—For use in Table 1, the calculated value of pV or pD shall be multiplied—

- (a) by a factor of 3 (rounded to 3 or 10 in multiples of 10) when one of the following conditions apply; or by a factor of 10 when two or more of the conditions apply:
 - (i) Fired equipment (e.g. fired oil heater) but not boilers.
 - (ii) Severe fatigue or where equipment would experience more than the following number of significant pressure and thermal stress cycles in the design lifetime:
 - Class 1, 2 or 3 pressure vessels or piping—10 000
 - Class 1H pressure vessels—1000
 - Class 2H pressure vessels—500
 - (iii) Equipment fitted with quick-actuating closures or doors.
 - (iv) Equipment sited in a facility which comes under the control of the Major Hazards Facility Legislation (e.g. similar to CIMAH Regulation in U.K.).
 - (v) Road tankers and transportable vessels. The lower volume limit listed in Table 1 is also to be reduced to 0.05 L for all contents except non-harmful. Condition (a) (ii) above is not intended to additionally apply.
- (b) by a factor of 30 for pressure vessels and piping with design pressure exceeding 50 MPa.

5. Modifications to hazard levels for special conditions—The hazard level determined from Table 1 shall be modified for boilers subject to cyclic loading where the number of significant pressure stress and thermal stress cycles exceeds 10 000 (see Note 4 (a) (ii) above): change the hazard level applicable in Table 1 to the next higher hazard level (e.g. from Hazard Level C to Hazard Level B).

6. Combined conditions—All three conditions of volume, diameter pressure and the product pV x pD are to be met before a hazard level is determined except for the conditions given in Notes 10 and 11.

7. Hazard level pV and pD limits—If the product p x V or p x D equals the value of boundary between two categories, then the higher category shall apply.

8. Where pressure equipment can be classified into more than one hazard level, the worst hazard level shall be selected.

9. For details on the type of equipment covered by boilers, pressure vessels etc., refer to the particular product Standard.

10. The hazard category for pressure vessels having a design pressure not exceeding 0.05 MPa but which have a pressure diameter relationship above the application curves in AS 1210 shall be determined using a pV value equal to 0.3 times the actual pV of the vessel.

11. For pressure vessels and piping with design pressures not exceeding 0.03 MPa vacuum or 0.05 MPa internal pressure, use Hazard Level E except for the following:

- (a) For pressure vessels, Item 1.1 where $V \leq 0.5$ L or $p \leq 0.05$ MPa or $pV \leq 0.1$ MPa.L the Hazard Level C shall apply.

- (b) For piping, Item 2.1 where $D \leq 32$ mm or $p \leq 0.05$ MPa or $pD \leq 10$ MPa.mm, the Hazard Level C shall apply.
- (c) For pressure piping, Items 2.2, 2.3 and 2.4, where $D \leq 32$ mm and $P > 5$ MPa, then the hazard level is to be selected for the appropriate contents and value of pD .

12. Piping from pressure vessels up to its first point of isolation shall take the most severe hazard level of the pressure vessel or the piping.
